Bullet hits passer-by in aftermath of ATM bomb

Izahn Krige
Email: izahnv@cxton.co.za

An ATM was bombed in the early hours of Saturday morning in Nigel Road, Selcourt.

A ProSafe Security officer responded to the scene when the employees at the filling station across the road from the ATM pressed the panic button at 2.20am.

According to Liaan Horton, general manager of ProSafe Security, the officer was shot at multiple times by the robbers while he was in his response vehicle.

The officer tried to drive himself to hospital but lost consciousness en route, due to a gunshot wound in his upper leg, and crashed into a tree.

The officer was operated on on Sunday and remains in a stable condition.

Captain Johannes Ramphora, spokesman for the Springs Police, says several AK47 and 9mm cartridges were found on the scene.

A male in a Fiat who was driving past was shot in the head by a stray bullet.

The victim was taken to Tambo Memorial Hospital where he was initially in a coma but died on Monday. "A blue Toyota Corolla was left on the scene and possibly belonged to the suspects," says Ramphora.

A woman, who stopped at the filling station to buy water, was warned of the danger and told to leave, but four males wearing balaclavas approached her vehicle and ordered her to get out of the vehicle or they would kill her.

The robbers drove off in the vehicle, which was later recovered in KwaThema. An investigation is underway but arrests have been made.

Mfundo Tshabalala, a car guard who slept in the vicinity, says he saw the events unfold.

"I was sleeping across the road when I heard the explosion," he says.

Tshabalala says he feared for his life when the robbers started shooting.

"I was very scared and couldn't believe what I saw."

A hole in the wall where the ATM sat before it was blasted apart in Nigel Road, Selcourt on Saturday.

Mfundo Tshabalala witnessed the entire event unfold as robbers blew up an ATM in Nigel Road, Selcourt in the early hours of Saturday morning.

Armed suspects kill man

Lekupe Midisane (50) was shot and killed by two suspects at Daggafontein Informal Settlement last Thursday.

Springs police spokesman Capt Johannes Ramphora says the deceased and his friend parked their silver Toyota Corolla next to the informal settlement.

Two unknown armed men approached and started shooting at them.

Midisane drove off across the road and over the railway line, where the vehicle came to a standstill.

Ramphora says the two suspects followed on foot and shot the deceased twice in the neck, took an undisclosed amount of cash from the vehicle and fled.

Ramphora says police took a statement from the passenger of the Toyota who was still sitting in the vehicle after the shooting.

A SAPS sector vehicle gave chase after they received information from the community on a suspicious-looking white Mazda 323.

"The driver stopped the vehicle and the passenger ran away, however, we managed to arrest the driver (age unknown)," says Ramphora.

Paramedics were called to the scene and declared Midisane dead on the scene.

Both vehicles, the Toyota and Mazda, were taken to the police station.

Ramphora says the suspect will appear in court soon.

The hijacked Isuzu 8-Tonner recovered by EMPD officers in a yard of a house in Eastvale on Friday.

Man discovers his colleague's body

Simon Mahlangu, a security guard who was shot five times, was found in his vehicle near Tonk Meter Way, Selcourt on Friday.

His body was found by a colleague who went looking for him after their control room couldn't get hold of Mahlangu after 10pm.

SAPS spokesman Capt Johannes Ramphora says the vehicle was tracked on a gravel road.

"It is alleged Mahlangu was approached by a suspect he had previously arrested for a business robbery in Selcourt," says Ramphora.

He sustained bullet wounds to his chest, head, left arm and hands.

No arrests have been made and police are investigating a murder case.

Officer, mom arrested

On Friday an EMPD officer and his mother were arrested after EMPD officers found a hijacked truck on their premises in Eastvale.

hammer and all three victims were thrown into the back of the truck.

"The victims were subsequently dumped near Boksburg," says Kgasago.

Two EMPD officers picked up the signal of the hijacked truck, an Isuzu 8-Tonner, at 9am, which led them to Eastvale where the truck was located at the house allegedly belonging to the metro police officer and his mother.

The driver sustained serious injuries and is said to be fighting for his life in the ICU at Tambo Memorial Hospital in Boksburg.

"Seemingly, the two suspects changed the number plates of the truck, as the ones displayed do not correspond with the clearance certificate displayed on the windscreen," says Kgasago.

It is believed the officer's mother is a correctional services officer.

According to Wilfred Kgasago, EMPD spokesman, the owner of the truck claims the truck, with three employees inside, left the premises in Emalahleni (Witbank) to deliver a shipment of flour to a business in Benoni.

The duo was arrested and detained at Springs Police Station on charges of possession of a hijacked vehicle.

The other two suspects are still at large.

The suspects will remain in custody and were expected to appear in the Springs Magistrate's Court on Monday.

On their way there, a marked EMPD vehicle with blue lights, occupied by four fully uniformed officers, stopped them.

"One of the officers approached the driver and struck him with a

"In-depth investigations are underway to get to the bottom of the matter," says Kgasago.

EMPD shows zero tolerance to crime

The EMPD By-law Enforcement Unit in conjunction with Urban Management officials confiscated 27 vehicles during an operation in Springs on Friday.

Some of the vehicles towed away by the EMPD from illegal businesses in Springs on Friday.

The officials embarked on a special operation targeting illegal mechanics and car dealers operating from sidewalks and intersections without authorisation.

EMPD spokesman Wilfred Kgasago says these people display their vehicles for sale on public roads, repair vehicles on sidewalks and use their residential space to spray-paint and panel-beat vehicles.

roads and engaging in vehicle repairs in areas not zoned for business without approval is an offence.

commit such offences," says Kgasago.

No arrests have been made but fines and written warnings were issued to all the illegal car dealers and mechanics.

"We identified the hotspots last Monday and on Friday the law enforcers swooped on their targets where a total of 110 vehicles were towed away," says Kgasago.

The hotspots identified were along Ermelo Road and Lewis Avenue in Strubenvale, Third Avenue, CBD as well as in Springs and Nigel roads where 27 vehicles were impounded.

R1 000 bail for woman

A Springs woman (39), accused of kidnapping a nine-month-old baby, was granted bail in the Springs Regional Court, last Wednesday.

"The grandmother looked for the baby, but couldn't find him, and, upon further investigation, it was suspected that her daughter had been drugged," says Ramphora.

Springs police arrested the woman on the evening of November 11 and charged her with kidnapping, purgery and defeating the ends of justice.

When the police arrived on the scene they found an empty medicine bottle on the floor.

Capt Johannes Ramphora, Springs police spokesman, says the accused allegedly removed the baby from a house in Eastvale.

Upon further investigation, the police and Barries Barnard, from Hi5Kids Recovery Unit, found the baby in Selection Park, on November 12.

The accused allegedly called the baby's grandmother, who found her daughter (age unknown) and granddaughter (2) in the house.

The woman appeared in court last Wednesday and was granted bail of R1 000.

Ramphora says the case was postponed to December 12.

Supergel owner dies after attack in Sundra

The owner of Supergel, a store well-known to most Springsites, Kathy van Coppenhagen (56), died in hospital last Wednesday after she was shot during a house robbery in Sundra on November 11.

Kathy is also grandmother to Caylum Willemse (see story below).

The robbery took place at their smallholding in Sundra where they were overpowered and allegedly held captive by two armed suspects.

Derek Bester, chairman of the Rietkol Sundra Bulldogs neighbourhood watch, confirms Kathy died in Life the Glynnwood Hospital in Benoni last Wednesday.

He says the news of Kathy's death has sent shock waves through the community of Sundra.

It is believed two robbers shot her and left her for dead while they assaulted her husband Frik (59) and demanded cash from the house.

Bester says Kathy managed to crawl to one of the dog kennels where she hid, taking shelter from the rain and the suspects.

The suspects continued to assault Frik, who later managed to escape and ran to his neighbour for help.

Bester says the neighbour called the neighbourhood watch and Sundra police and a security company for assistance.

When they arrived on the scene at 12am, on Friday, the suspects had already fled the scene.

"We looked for Kathy, but

couldn't find her.

"It was only after Frik called her name several times that she answered from the dog kennel," says Bester.

He claims Kathy was immediately taken to hospital and was operated on early on Saturday morning.

The bullet allegedly damaged her liver and colon and her pancreas had to be removed.

Her condition deteriorated and she died last Wednesday.

The family was not available for comment but has asked, on social media, for privacy during this difficult time.

Bester says he is not sure if any suspects have been arrested since the robbery.

Capt Salome van der Westhuizen, Sundra SAPS station commander, confirms the shooting.

"Frik gave us his statement over the weekend as he was too traumatised to talk to us before," says van der Westhuizen.

She says although no arrests have been made thus far they are following every lead to catch the perpetrators.

According to the family nothing was removed from the house during the robbery.

The funeral was due to be held at 11am at the NG Gemeente in Sundra today (Thursday).

New operation date for Caylum

Springs-born Caylum Willemse's life-saving operation in Boston, USA has been moved to December 3.

The 10-month-old baby and his parents were due to leave for Boston on November 9, but due to unforeseen circumstances their departure date was rescheduled to November 27.

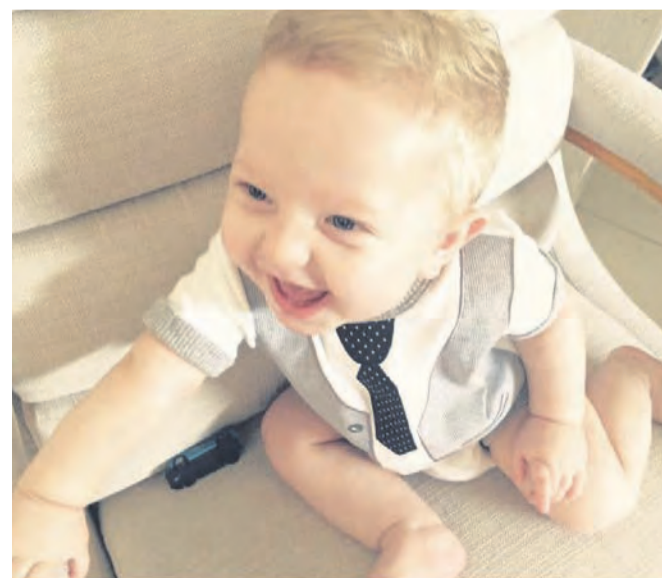

The operation was originally scheduled for November 18, but the family is content with the new arrangements.

Caylum's father, Wayne Willemse (25), says the procedure is called a posterior tracheomalacia and the estimated time for the operation is eight to 18 hours.

The operation will be performed by Dr Russell Jennings, the director of the oesophageal and airway treatment centre at Boston Children's Hospital.

According to Wayne, they were in contact with the hospital coordinator to discuss the operation's date.

It was during that conversation, when the coordinator said it best to rather leave South Africa seven days before the

"The coordinator asked us to move our departure date to after Thanksgiving celebrations, on November 23," says Wayne.

Caylum was born with an abnormal connection between his oesophagus and the windpipe, called a tracheo-oesophageal fistula (TOF), as well as oesophageal atresia (OA).

TOF is an abnormal connection between the oesophagus and the trachea, while OA is when the oesophagus develops in two parts, meaning food can't reach the stomach.

"We feel positive about the operation and are forever grateful for the assistance of everyone thus far, to make this operation possible," says Wayne.

Pageant girls are ready to serve their community

Two good friends recently competed in the Miss Teen Kwatsaduza pageant where both shone brightly.

Participating in only her second pageant, 14-year-old Selection Park resident, Imani Ngqukuvana, was crowned Miss Teen Kwatsaduza, while Lebogang Ndlovu from KwaThema was the runner-up and first princess.

Mrs South Africa Globe, Sandi Maqoqa, attended the event and invited the teenagers to Miriam Makeba Centre for Girls, which is a home for destitute and/or abused girls between the ages of 11 and 18 years.

Both the girls were named as official care sisters at the centre and will be spending time mentoring the resident girls.

Mister Africa 2016, community developer and philanthropist, Phetolo Mohale, who manages the girls, says that once his students reach success on the local level, they are required to participate in community service projects for one year before they are allowed to participate in national pageants.

"It's not just all about the glitz and glamour," he says.

In 2013, Phetolo started spearheading fundraising events at Tsakane Primary School. He then opened his own modelling school for disadvantaged children from townships. This afforded him the opportunity to travel to Germany and Turkey with his modelling students.

Both teenagers want to continue modelling after high school.

Lebogang has participated in six pageants and was named Princess of Africa in 2016.

She currently attends Kenneth Masekela Secondary School where she received distinctions in all of her subjects and was named the top learner in her grade.

Imani attends Springs Girls High School.

N17's Furniture donation makes a difference

SAPS Social Crime Prevention Unit have turned their office into a child-friendly environment.

This comes after they received donations of furniture from Netcare N17 Hospital manager Andries Joubert, last Wednesday.

Andries saw the need for furniture on social media and he remembered the boardroom table and six chairs they have in store.

"To add to the table and chairs, we also bought two plastic children's tables and eight chairs, crayons and colour-in books," he says.

Yolanda Cothill, of the SAPS unit, was overwhelmed by the hospital's donation.

She says they work with families and children and this contribution has certainly changed their office into a child-friendly environment.

"This donation will most certainly make our job much easier when we have children to talk to," she adds.

Yolanda and Amanda Greybe regularly conduct checks at local schools for drugs, as well as dangerous weapons, with the assistance of Henry Harper from Wild Wild Guardians, Barries Barnard from Hi5Kids Recovery Unit and the EMPD.

"We appreciate the support from the hospital," she says.

Andries Joubert, Netcare N17 Hospital's manager, and Yolanda Cothill from the Springs SAPS Crime Prevention Unit, discuss the donation made by the hospital.

Lourens Bekker (left), chief operating officer of Life Healthcare, with Dr Tertia Nieuwoudt, hospital manager of Life Springs Parkland Hospital, André Meyer, chief executive officer of Life Healthcare, and Adri Botes, ex-hospital manager of Life Springs Parkland Hospital. Lourens and Andre handed over the certificate and trophy to the two women who have guided the hospital's staff over the past year.

Hospital receives top award

Life Springs Parkland Hospital was recently awarded the Hospital of the Year 2015/2016 award - medium.

The awards event was hosted by Life Healthcare Group and held in Kleinmond, Western Cape.

The Life Achiever Awards is an annual event at which the group recognises their exceptional employees and teams, who not only actively live the group's values, but have also made a considerable contribution towards achieving the group's strategy.

The 26 awards were comprised of three categories: 10 Jakes Gerwel Service Hero awards, seven team awards, and nine regional and hospital awards.

Dr Tertia Nieuwoudt, who was appointed as hospital manager in July, received this award with Adri Botes, who worked as hospital manager from 2015 until June.

"We're proud to have received this award," says hospital manager Tertia Nieuwoudt.

She gives accolades to all the medical staff and ancillary services, for their involvement in the facility and for working together, to enable the hospital to achieve this special result.

Markville residents are in desperate need of help

The residents of Markville Flats in Eleventh Street, CBD, have asked the Ekurhuleni Metro for help with their broken elevator for almost nine months, but to date have received no response from the metro.

When the elevator first broke down in February, these senior citizens thought it was just a minor problem and that it would be solved in no time.

However, after several alleged promises by the metro to repair the faulty elevator, some of the residents still have to climb five flights of stairs to the top floor.

Johan Enslin, caretaker of the complex, claims several people have made changes to the elevator's electrical box in the past, which means it needs to be completely rewired.

"We don't know what the problem is, what to do and who to turn to for help. All we are asking is for the elevator to be fixed," he says.

Ward Clr Dean Stone was shocked by the news of Michael du Toit (84) who recently had to climb five flights of stairs after being discharged from a local hospital.

Du Toit's wife, Martie (79), says they have to make use of a rope to hoist their groceries to the fourth floor where they live as they cannot carry the groceries all the way to the top.

Another resident, Nic van Straaten (61), who lives on the third floor hasn't left his flat in almost three months.

"I am a diabetic and because my legs are swollen, I cannot walk properly and need help to get up from the chair to my bed," he says.

This is where van Straaten spends most of his time and where his medicine is being delivered to.

"I have not been to a doctor for a medical check-up in three months," he says.

Stone says the metro knows perfectly well all the residents living at Markville are senior citizens.

"Their ignorance to the elevator problem is unacceptable," he says.

Despite sending questions and several reminders to the metro, no response was received at the time of going to print.

Erin saves the day

Erin Murrell's (12) quick thinking helped prevent their house in Casseldale from catching fire last Thursday.

The family thought it was just an ordinary evening at home when Erin, who was in the main bedroom, smelled something burning.

"She also heard a soft ticking coming from behind the bed," says her mother, Melissa du Preez.

Melissa praised her daughter's quick thinking and believes Erin prevented a possible disaster.

Erin immediately unplugged the laptop, turned off the switch at the wall socket and moved the bed away from the wall.

The teenager didn't try to unplug the laptop or fiddle with the wall socket as she says they were taught at school to switch off the plug and call someone.

"She informed me of her discovery and when I investigated, I was shocked to find the three-point plug burned into the wall socket," Melissa says.

Their mattress already had a hole burned into it.

Melissa feels things could have taken a turn for the worse if it wasn't for Erin.

"Taking into consideration that during a recent incident an electrical fault caused a family's home to burn down and a child sustained several burns to his body, we are lucky," she says.

She says this incident may not be the type of disaster always written about but believes the prevention of a fire and Erin's quick thinking are something to be proud of.

"Erin doesn't see anything special in what has happened but her actions prevented another family from losing everything in a house fire," says Melissa.

They have contacted an electrician to establish why the trip switch didn't work.

Doctor offers readers a glimpse of his life

Springs doctor Henry Davel published his first book, containing short stories about his life as a small town family doctor last year, at the age of 75.

Henry decided early in his life, during primary school, that he wanted to write a book, but he never had the time, as he balanced being married with four children and running a successful practice, while enjoying several other hobbies and travelling the world.

"I am older now and don't have to rush to see 50 patients a day anymore," Henry says.

Over the years, many people with whom he's shared his stories, have suggested that he write a book.

One night, while working night shift in the casualty unit at Parkland Hospital, he decided to put pen to paper.

One of the nurses asked if she could read his writing and enjoyed it so much that she started rating each story out of 10.

According to Henry, the biggest compliments he received was when a colleague left him a note, saying that he should rather have remained a general practitioner instead of becoming a specialist.

"Once a girl walked up to me and told me that I delivered her and I replied jokingly that I remembered her little wet face and black sticky hair," he says, smiling.

"Without missing a beat she fired back and said that she remembered me, too, but I didn't have a beard and my hair was black instead of grey.

"It is things like that which make it fun." Henry printed 500

Afrikaans and 500 English copies of the book and says it's selling well at the moment.

He went through the process of making the book available in book stores and online, but says the logistical challenges between distributors, drivers, warehouses, agents and book stores are astronomical.

Fans can expect another book in the future, as Henry loves writing and sharing his stories.

Avid bird-watchers flock to Marievale Bird Sanctuary

The Springs/Nigel branch of the Wildlife Environmental Society of South Africa (Wessa) hosted a birdwatching walk at Marievale Bird Sanctuary on Saturday.

The weather conditions did not deter these avid birdwatchers from joining in the walk which was led by environmentalist Stan Madden.

Stan is one of the people responsible for turning the Marievale Bird Sanctuary into what it is today.

"I became interested in this piece of land in 1948, when it was used as hunting grounds," he says.

In 1968, Stan arranged for the land to be donated to the state for the protection of its bird species.

"In the 1970s, the area became known as a Ramsar site," Stan says.

He adds that they do still have many problems at the site but that they are working hard to find solutions.

"We have an unbelievable amount of discharged water in the system.

"Water from as far as Kempton Park drains into this area."

The pipes along the Blesbokspruit are blocked, causing some of the water to lie stagnant instead of flowing.

"The pipes need to be unblocked and some of the reeds removed to enable the water to flow," says Stan.

Feather in the hat for metro workers

Justice Pukwane (left) and Lungile Mashele are both metro workers who were recently seen cutting the long grass next to Welgedacht Road, Bakerton. They say that, due to all the rain, they cannot keep up with the rate at which the grass is growing.

Metro makes a mess

Dersley Park resident Martie van Niekerk, is at her wits' end with the traffic lights at the intersection of Paul Kruger Highway and Orpiment Avenue.

She says that a truck drove into a lamp post near the intersection a few weeks ago and the lights have been "on and off" since then.

However, the traffic lights have now been out of order since November 10, she says.

Martie says she has reported the fault twice, and several of her co-workers have done the same.

"It is an absolute nightmare as cars drive between 20 to 30 kilometres per hour from Presidents Dam all the way to the intersection," she says.

She also points out that the section of the road is deemed a high accident zone and she is concerned that nothing has been done to fix the lights.

Leoni Botha, who resides in Petersfield, says the intersection is an "absolute mess", especially in the afternoons.

After several failed attempts to reach the metro to follow up on the complaint she logged, she decided to phone the traffic department to request a points man but was disappointed to hear that all officers were busy.

She says the woman who answered the phone was rude and uninterested and refused to give Leoni her name and surname.

This article was submitted for print on Monday, at which point the traffic lights remained non-operational and the metro had not responded to queries put to them by the Advertiser.

Thirty peer educators enjoy HIV/Aids presentation

The annual Peer Educators Day 2016 was held in a boardroom at the Impala Human Resource Department in Cowles Road, Rowhill last Thursday.

Pule de Roland-Phillips, chairman of the Health and Wellness in the Workplace Forum of the Eastern Gauteng Chamber of Commerce and Industry, has been organising these events for the past seven years.

"I am in the field of adult education of health and wellness issues," she says.

The forum provides a platform for health and wellness peer educators of all member companies to further their knowledge on health matters.

Pule says the peer educators also network with one another with regard to their volunteer roles and responsibilities as educators in their various companies.

Thirty peer educators from Gold One, Impala, Cobra Water Tech and PFG, as well as members of the Ekurhuleni Metro Men's Forum and Brothers for Life, were present.

Both the Ekurhuleni Metro Men's Forum and Brothers for Life are organisations that advocate non-violence against women and children.

"The task of the educators is to educate people in their companies on wellness and health, violence employees on health, wellness and social issues.

With HIV/Aids as the topic of this year's event, all of the peer educators enjoyed the presentation by Thabiso Peo, metro director of the HIV/Aids unit.

He mentioned the metro is focusing on people who are most highly infected, which includes the age group 18 to 24 years.

"It is the most fertile years where transactional sex takes place and it is found mostly among university and college students," Thabiso says.

According to metro statistics, the estimated number of new infections per week proved, among women aged between 15 and 24 years in East and southern Africa, that South Africa is rated the highest with 2 363. Uganda is second with only 570 new cases per week.

Mogale Mashiabatha from Brothers of Life says everyone should play a role in their personal, professional and leadership capacities to stop rape of all kinds, as well as sexual violence, killing and abuse of women and children, domestic violence, and abuse and violations of people with disabilities.

"We want men to express our collective condemnation of these acts of violence perpetrated in our communities," says Mogale.

and social issues," says Pule.

She encourages all companies to implement a peer educators programme in their workplace so that the employees and their community can educate other

Merit awards honour companies, individuals

Fernando Booyesen's Outstanding Sports Achievement award was given to his father, Dirk Booyesen.

Sixteen people received awards at the 17th Eastern Gauteng Chamber of Commerce and Industry's (EGCCI) President's Merit Banquet, last Thursday.

The event was held at Riverside Country Lodge, in Grootvaly.

The purpose of the event is to honour businesses for employment creation, enterprise, skills, social and economic development, environmental protection and recognition by peers for excellence.

Individuals received special awards for social upliftment of the community, outstanding sports achievement and environment.

Phillip de Jager received a special award for his commitment and dedication to the chamber over the past 42 years.

"He was co-opted onto the executive committee of the chamber in 1974, by reason of his legal expertise and knowledge of the chamber movement," says Mary Reynolds, president of the EGCCI.

The Skills and Enterprise Development award was given to PFG Building Glass, while Reynolds handed over the Environment Special Achievement award to Stan Madden, for his contribution to the environment.

Springs Mall's construction on point, despite challenges

Giuricich Bros Construction confirms its construction of the innovative Springs Mall at Blue Crane Eco Park is on track for a March 16 opening. The regional 48 000m<sup>2</sup> Springs Mall is its largest retail development so far as a main contractor. Construction for the R950-million mall broke ground in 2015. "We are proud to be part of developing the all-new Springs Mall. "Not only is Giuricich Bros Construction the main contractor, but Murinda Investments, which is part of the Giuricich Bros Group, is an investor and a proud joint owner of the mall," says director of Giuricich Bros Construction, Nicky Giuricich. The group has played a key role in helping to unlock the Springs Mall development, which is the brainchild of the Springs-based D'Arrigo family. Unique in many ways, this world-class regional mall development in Gauteng has demanded the highest level of construction skill and expertise from its contractor. Springs Mall is a feat of engineering as its site is over dolomitic rock, which weathers and erodes when it touches water. This presented some challenges for its construction. Giuricich, who is also the site director, explains that Springs Mall is essentially being built on a concrete raft, with its ground floor comprising a cast slab instead of the normal surface bed. Usually, drainage would be suspended under a building's first floor, but with this slab, it isn't possible. Instead, an underground service tunnel running the length of the mall has been created as a drainage spine, with a dual containment system of pipes within pipes to ensure no leakage. "This is extremely unusual and possibly even the first time it has been done for a shopping centre in South Africa," says Giuricich. He adds the mall's ambitious construction is not only based on a solid foundation of world-class engineering in consultation with specialist dolomitic consultants, but is also in keeping with the latest leading international standards and deeply respectful of its sensitive site. Set amid wetlands, Springs Mall's design is inspired by its setting. So too is its construction. Both target creating an environmentally sensitive structure. "Most of Springs Mall's construction material and products have been sourced locally, within a 50km radius of the mall. "The steel is local, so are the bricks and mortar. "This ensures the local economy gets optimal benefit from the project and reduces the structure's construction carbon footprint, wherever possible," explains Giuricich.

The Springs Mall, which will open in March, has already been 96% pre-let with four months left before opening.

The Springs SPCA has a number of animals in need of new homes and shelter. To adopt a pet, visit the SPCA at Plot 8, Ermelo Road, or call them on 087 940 2831 or 082 668 5230.

My name is Angel and I am a little Jack Russel girl. I would love a family to call my own.

I am a tiny terrier puppy of only six weeks. I would like nothing more than a warm bed to sleep in and my very own family.

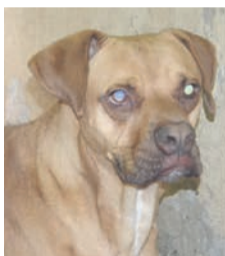

My name is Lady and I am a small, cross-German Shepherd girl. I am only two years old and still have many years of love to give.

Hey everyone. I am a small cross-terrier puppy and I'm only six weeks old. Please come and take me home.

My name is Daisy and I'm between three and four months old. I'm a dachshund girl and I'm very friendly, so I would make a great addition to your family.

Hey guys. Paw here. I am a boxer and pit bull mix and I'm a very shy boy. I am two years old and would love a family to call my own.

You can call me Bobby. I am a Yorkie and still just a puppy. I promise to be a good boy if you'll just give me the chance.

My name is Popcorn and I came to the SPCA with my two brothers. We are Jack Russel-cross puppies and love to play.

Hey everyone. I am a Sharpei-cross and I am just the sweetest little boy you will ever meet. Please come and see my lovely personality for yourself.

I'm Majozi and I'm a female Jack Russel-cross with a lot of love to give. Please come and visit me to see for yourself.

Hi guys. I am a tan and white Jack Russel who came to the SPCA with my two brothers. Please take me home and shower me with love.

I am a big terrier boy called Jack. I'm just a big fur ball that needs to be loved.

Mayor Masina hands over 440 title deeds

Kwatsaduza – Residents from around Kwatsaduza gathered at the KwaThema Society for the Care of the Aged to receive their title deeds last Friday.

The delivery was conducted by the Mayor of Ekurhuleni, Mzwandile Masina, along with the MMC for Human Settlement, Clr Lesiba Mpya.

Speaker of Council Clr Patricia Khumalo, plus Chief Whip of Council Clr Jongizizwe Dlabathi, were among other local government officials and councillors.

In his address to the community, the mayor explains that a title deed is a letter of authority from the metro.

And having this document, means for the home owner that the house now officially belongs to them.

“When we took office on August 23, we made this a priority - to give out 11 000 title deeds to their rightful owners in our five years in term.

“Since then, this is the second event we've had giving residents these important documents - following our first stop in Tokoza recently.

“Therefore during this visit in KwaThema, 440 title deeds will be issued and for those people who aren't present, officials will visit their homes to give them their title deeds.

“Please don't take these title deeds to loan sharks, as they won't feel for you when you are unable to pay them, but will just take your home,” he says.

Resident Mandla Msomi (49) of KwaThema White City, says he's very happy to have received the title deed.

“I've been waiting for this document for a while - since 2010 - as this was my parents' home.

“My father, however, died in 1973 while my mother died in 1985,” he says.

Another recipient, Elda Bangani (74), says she's also thrilled with getting this document after waiting since 1994.

“At least now I'll sleep well, knowing all is in order with this house,” she says.

Kopano Disabled Movement Centre members.

Raising disability awareness

The Kopano Disabled Movement Centre recently hosted an awareness campaign.

The event was held at the centre in KwaThema to educate the community about Disability Awareness Month.

“Since disability awareness is celebrated from November 1 to December 3, we hosted an event to educate the community on what the centre is about, people living with disabilities, challenges we face and projects we do.

“It was also for us to show what projects they do at the centre including gardening, beading and book covers,” says member Amos Makhonjwa.

“Through the centre, we wanted to help create opportunities for our people as we believe our disability is not our weakness,” says member Sthembiso Ndebele.

Some of the challenges this community say they face include not enough housing being allocated to people living with disabilities, not enough disabled people getting employment and having government representatives who don't understand their challenges.

They say they don't want to be put together in the same category as seniors as their challenges are not the same while they also want to be considered for employment in local projects just like able-bodied people.

The biggest trial faced by them is that public transport and some public facilities are not accessible to most of them while they say children with disabilities are put in special schools instead of being placed in mainstream schools.

“Our group of 25 participants meet and teach each other skills on a daily basis, and we help those who attend to get bursaries or find possible employment.

“What the centre is most in need of is transport, food, and office equipment,” says Ndebele.

Mahlangu young and gifted

The gifted and self-taught Mpumelelo Mzwandile Mahlangu (21) has surprised many with his creative pieces.

The youngster started venturing into creating artworks in 2010, while in Grade Eight at the Kenneth Masikela Secondary School and has never looked back.

“My grandfather Simon ‘Bibane’ Mahlangu is a well-known carpenter around Kwatsaduza and has been a great inspiration to me.

“He used to take me along on jobs and it is through working with him that I have gained my work ethic and creativity,” he says.

Mahlangu says after matriculating in 2014, he opened his business called ‘Nkanyezi Art Collaboration and Design’ working from his room.

Things however, have not always been easy as it is still a challenge running his own business with not enough space or funding.

“Last year I got my big break when I received an invitation to participate in the Thami Mnye Fine Arts Awards.

“I then took up the challenge and entered my sculpture which I called Kings Highway.

“It was my first time entering a competition and when I won, I was surprised and that is where I saw and started believing that I could really do this,” he shares.

What caught Mahlangu off guard the most was how people reacted to his work when they discovered he had not even been formally trained.

Mahlangu adds that some of the winnings he invested while the rest was spent on materials and his family.

In September he again surprised himself after winning a competition which was hosted in KwaThema in celebration of Heritage Month.

“I use different materials for my artwork, which can be anything from sticks to seeds and stones.

“This then means I don't buy much except for glue and the boards, as all other materials I use are things I collect from the environment.

“What I love and enjoy about art is that I can find peace and connect with it.

Mpumelelo Mzwandile Mahlangu with his awards.

“It is also like tapping into a whole new world when I start a new art piece, which I really enjoy,” he says.

The young artistic man says his future plans include getting sponsorship so he can build a workshop where he can work and show off his art pieces.

In addition to this, he wants to help other young people to learn the art skills he holds dear to his heart.

Mahlangu thanks everyone who has helped him on his journey, including his Grade 10 teacher Makhosazana Mthimkhulu who always believed in him and his talent.

“Be honest and love what you do,” he encourages.

The SAPS, EMPD and the Ekurhuleni Disaster and Emergency Management Services work on Tonk Meter Way where the cyclist was killed. Seen in the picture is the remains of the man's bicycle after he was hit by a truck on Friday morning.

Cyclist killed by truck

A man believed to be in his mid-30s was hit by a truck driven by an employee of a non-alcoholic beverage company.

The incident occurred on Friday on the Tonk Meter Way at around 7.15am, slowing morning traffic.

According to police spokesman Sgt Harry Manaka, the truck driver was coming from the company's Nigel plant heading to Springs for a delivery while it is believed that the deceased was coming from KwaThema.

"The deceased, who was riding a bicycle, was allegedly trying to cross the busy main road during peak-hour traffic when he was hit.

"It is, however, unclear at this stage whether the driver and the deceased saw each other before the collision occurred," he says.

The man was declared dead on the scene by paramedics.

"The driver has been given a warning while police are still investigating a case of culpable homicide.

"We urge cyclists to only cross the road where and when it is safe to do so.

"Further, we plead with motorists to ensure that they adhere to the speed limit and to be vigilant of pedestrians and cyclists, crossing the roads, at all times," says Manaka.

Possibility of lower fuel prices come month-end

There could be some relief for motorists visiting the fuel pumps at the end of the month, according to the Automobile Association (AA).

"International oil prices remained stable throughout October, but have been in decline since November began," the AA says.

Current data suggests a reduction in the petrol price of 45c a litre, with diesel set to go down by 38c and illuminating paraffin enjoying a 40c reduction.

However, the AA warns that the Rand has weakened sharply against the dollar in the wake of the US election results, stating that if the local currency did not return to its previous levels, the fuel price picture could be quite different at month-end.

The association adds that the currency is now also vulnerable to possible shifts in US policy when president-elect, Donald Trump, takes office early in 2017.

"While the expected reduction at the pumps ahead of the Christmas season are very welcome, South Africans would be prudent not to expect sustained drops in the fuel price over the next few months," the AA concludes.

higher education & training

Higher Education and Training
REPUBLIC OF SOUTH AFRICA

EKURHULENI EAST TVET COLLEGE

"Committed to Excellence"

NOT SURE ABOUT WHAT TO DO AFTER YOU LEAVE SCHOOL?

Read on and see why a TVET College could be your partner to a brighter future...

January 2017 could be an exciting time for you as you leave school behind you and start equipping yourself for a career, whether as a self-employed entrepreneur or finding a niche for yourself in the workplace. Remember, in making yourself employable, whether it is as an artisan or in the corporate world, it is not WHAT you know but what you can DO with what you know that will make the difference.

People with skills are going to be increasingly in great demand. Aspiring to become a doctor, lawyer or engineer may sound impressive but only a handful of students every year will become doctors, lawyers and engineers. Yet becoming a plumber, electrician or welder gives you a trade that could open the way for you to start your own business and become wealthy. What you can offer in the workplace will also always be in demand.

PRINCIPAL
Ms HM Sibande

SIX GOOD REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD CONSIDER ENROLLING AS A STUDENT AT EKURHULENI EAST TVET COLLEGE:

- 1. We offer a wide selection of programmes: You need to use the time after you leave school to equip yourself with the skills that will make you employable. TVET Colleges offer vocational training of a high standard in many fields: ICT, Tourism, Accounting, Secretarial, Hospitality, Electrical, Mechanical and Civil Engineering, Wholesale and Retail as well as a wide range of artisan trades that are recognised as being in high demand e.g. Fitter and Turner, Welder, Boiler Maker, Air-Conditioning Services Technician, Melter etc.
- 2. You can enrol as a student at EEC with a Grade 9 or a Grade 12: If you have passed Grade 9 you can enrol for the NC(V) National Certificate (Vocational) which will give you a Matric Certificate in vocational subjects after three years. If you have already passed Grade 12, you could enrol for a Nated (Report 191) course (N4 – N6). Each level takes six months so at the end of 18 months you could have completed the theoretical aspect of your training. In order to get a National Diploma, you would have to have a further 18 months in the workplace as an intern for Business Studies or twenty-four months for the Engineering Diploma.
- 3. You will have real-life practical experience in the workplace and exposure to hosting companies: A crucial reason why you should think about doing your training at a TVET College is that we believe that students "learn best by doing". Whether it is in simulation rooms or in the electrical or mechanical workshops or in the real workplace, the theoretical and practical components of a TVET College curriculum have to be integrated. Students have to complete a period of Work Based Experience (WBE). This gives them actual real-life experience in the workplace and the chance to apply the knowledge they have acquired in the classroom. Those students who approach their WBE period professionally with a determination to learn as much as they can, enhance their chances of becoming employable. Qualifying students are also selected on the basis of their academic record, to participate in learnerships where they divide their time at the College between their theory classes and the practical components in the workplace with a company. They often have the opportunity to take their trade tests with that company and make contacts in the industry which could be helpful to them in the future. Students are encouraged to be proactive in marketing themselves and looking for placement opportunities on their own initiative.
- 4. Financially needy students can have a quality, affordable education as long as they pass all their subjects and attend all their classes: TVET Colleges can offer high school learners a quality and affordable education. NSFAS bursaries (not loans that have to be repaid) are available to financially needy students who are academically capable, provided they pass their subjects and attend all their classes and practicals. Online applications for NSFAS bursaries for next year close on 30 November 2016.
- 5. All the programmes offered at EEC are accredited and we have accredited Trade Test Centres: When selecting a College ensure that it is an accredited TVET College so you can be sure that the certificate or diploma you are awarded is valid. Never, ever enrol at a fly-by-night "college" that cannot prove their accreditation. The "qualification" you would get from them will be worthless.
- 6. In choosing your career you are making one of the most important decisions of your life: There are endless opportunities and possibilities that come with a vocational education. Any of the students you see here could be you! Why not visit any one of our five campuses in Springs, Benoni, Kwa-Thema, Daveyton and Brakpan or call 011 730-6600 and let us help you to find the career that is right for you.

16 days of reaching out to the community

The 16 Days of Activism against Women and Children Abuse campaign kicked off on November 18.

Springs SAPS, five non-profit organisations, one local business and the EMPD K9 Dog Unit are reaching out to children and senior citizens in need.

Capt Johannes Ramphora, SAPS spokesman, says Wild Wild Guardians, End Time Messengers, Pink Pistols, Geduld CPF and Arms of Angels decided to assist the police in this awareness campaign.

The SAPS departments involved are Social Crime Prevention and Family Violence, Child Protection and Sexual Offences Unit.

The aim of the 16 Days of Activism is to raise awareness about women and child abuse.

"Our vision is to protect, serve and make people aware of women and child abuse," says Ramphora.

The first outreach started on Friday when several of these organisations, including the police, visited a local school and talked about drug abuse.

Ramphora says at a visit to another school on Wednesday they planned on talking about bullying and drug abuse.

"We should never stop believing that we can make a difference if we stand together and reach out to those who are most affected," he says.

These organisations plan on visiting Vita Nova Centre in Daggafontein on December 2 as well as the Far East Rand Hospital on December 9.

They also plan to visit old age homes in Springs and hand out cupcakes on December 10.

Anyone who wants to contribute or join them in making this time of raising awareness a success can contact Henry Harber from Wild Wild Guardians on 076 176 3558.

16 Days of Activism awareness

In an effort to raise more awareness around the 16 Days of Activism, the Cool Dads Foundation will be hosting a picnic.

"The foundation has committed itself to saying 'No' to women and child abuse, in support of 16 Days of Activism against women and child abuse.

"Not in our name will children and women be abused," emphasises foundation CEO Bongani Luvalo.

He explains that this foundation is aimed at grooming fathers to be powerful role models for their children and the youth at large, especially young boys.

This is to ensure that they raise youth who understand the dynamics of preparing for and becoming ideal fathers for their offspring and other children who may perceive them as father figures.

"As a foundation we seek to bridge the gap of absent fathers in the society and uplifting fatherly duties to present and non-present fathers.

"It is for this reason that we, together with the Ekurhuleni ANCYL, are proud to host a picnic in support of 16 Days of Activism against women and child abuse," he says.

Child abuse

The aims of the event are:

- To create awareness of women and child abuse.
- To commit men to not be bystanders or witnesses of abuse.
- To promote the importance of being a responsible father.
- To highlight the effects of broken homes.
- To promote an awareness of health and the importance of healthy lifestyles.

The picnic will be hosted on December 3, from 11am to 4pm, at the Ndaba Tree Heritage Park situated at the corner of Shabangu and Nkosi streets in KwaThema.

Entrance is free and locals are encouraged to attend.

For more information contact Luvalo or Zinhle Masuku on 011 737 1076 or 072 087 5798.

Choral singers donate to Vita Nova

The proceeds from an annual Choral Festival held at Fatima Hall in Springs Extension on Sunday was handed over to Vita Nova Centre on Tuesday.

Two local singers Reuben Mazibuko and Mmule Mdlalose approached the centre in 2015 to propose the Choral Mass Choir event which was welcomed by the centre director, Michelle Immelman.

The purpose of the event is to raise funds for the centre," says Reuben.

Combined church choirs from KwaThema performed including a choir from Benoni, the Cantare Jubiloso and soloists.

"The fund-raising event was well attended and we plan to go even bigger next year," says Reuben.

Bassy Lesia and Prof Gideon Els from Cantare Jubiloso were the two conductors at the event.

Marina Potgieter, Vita Nova's assistant director, says the afternoon was filled with beautiful classical music, with extremely talented professional vocalists.

Marina Potgieter (left) from Vita Nova Centre in Daggafontein receives a donation from two singers Mmule Mdlalose and Reuben Mazibuko on Tuesday.

The organisers are planning to host the event in September rather than November.

Marina thanked everyone involved for their contribution to make this event a success.

"The donation we received will be put to good use and we thank Reuben and Mmule for their continuous support," says Marina.

Metro workers to be educated

Disappointed Strubenvale resident writes:

We live in Marks Crescent, Strubenvale and our black bags are usually collected on a Tuesday, that is if they are not striking or have some other excuse not to collect.

Recently our black bags were not removed on collection day, so we kept putting them out each day and they were finally collected on November 11.

Due to the fact that there was no collection, our black dustbin was full, so we had to resort to using our green dustbin, which is exactly the same except for the colour.

My husband was outside when they collected, they refused to take the green dustbin and the two loose black bags standing next to it.

When he asked why they weren't taking them, he was told they were doing us a favour by taking the green dustbin and loose bags.

The driver then just drove off, leaving the green dustbin still full and the two black bags still standing there.

The point I am trying to make is if they collect on the days that they should, then we wouldn't have to resort to using other dustbins or leaving loose black bags on the side of the road.

Why then should we be punished for their tardiness?

Surely in cases like these where they know they are collecting late, they should make exceptions to the rule?

The fact remains that it is their fault that we had more black bags to collect this week.

• Metro spokesman Themba Gadebe says: In the event that refuse is not collected according to the refuse calendar, residents are allowed to put their extra black bags alongside the 240 litre bins for collection.

However, bins with other colours will not be serviced.

We will continue with our endeavour to educate our people to

Dié winkel is bobaas

Elna Linch van Strubenvale skryf:

Hiermee 'n baie groot kompliment aan 'n troeteldierwinkel in Ermeloweg, Springs. Voorwaar julle het 'n gewone troeteldierwinkel omskep in 'n klein diereparadys. Ons hoef nie meer ver te ry Boksburg toe om kwaliteit speelgoed en bybore vir ons troeteldiere te koop nie. Julle winkel is so netjies en mooi uitgelê met soveel om van te kies en te keur.

Die grootste verrassing is die agterplaas. Speelplek vir die kinders, bankies in die skadu waar mamma en pappa in die koelte kan sit en ontspan, en die groot verskeidenheid diere. Hoenders, pappegaie, ponies, varkies, bokkies, en die groot verskeidenheid tropiese visse.

Vir ons stadskinders is dit 'n dieretuin in die klein! Nogmaals geluk en dankie aan Linda en haar vriendelike personeel, julle maak ons Springsmense trots.

Ek wil ons mense regtig aanmoedig om gerus daar 'n draai te maak met kinders en kleinkinders en die natuur te geniet. Pak 'n piekniekmandjie en gaan geniet die buitelig.

Lack of respect for disabled people is rife in Springs

Disgruntled disabled person from Springs writes:

I am a disabled person who has never experienced such a total lack of respect for disabled people as I have in Springs.

I have been fighting the disabled parking issue all over the East Rand.

The metro told me they don't see it as important to enforce the law.

They are not allowed to fine people on private property and the parking at shopping centres is private property.

I have contacted the companies that have branded cars parking in a disabled parking and one of the companies responded to my query.

They said action will be taken against the driver.

• Despite sending questions to the metro on November 2, no response was received at the time of going to print.

Dog's blog

Was unbelievably glad to have Mom home. Life returned to normal and I no longer worried if somebody would remember to let me lick their dinner plate or feed me my liver-covered pills on time.

I know that is mean, but Mom is Mom. However... she seemed to bring back some really nasty weather with her. Rainy, cold with much roaring from that horrible Thunderdog.

One night the bellowing was beyond bad - so I wormed my way under the shield that Mom had velcroed to the base of the bed to prevent me from going underneath it. Did it on Alpha's side because I knew Mom would wake up immediately if I tried on her side.

She sleeps on snooze and wakes up easily.

Alpha, on the other hand, hears only what he thinks he's hearing.

Halfway through the night I had a bit of a ticky fit and my head crunched into the top of the bed.

Mom leapt out and peered under the murky darkness.

FUDGES!!! She hissed in capital letters. WHAT are you DOING there? GET OUT immediately.

Looked at her... ummmmm no. DEFINITELY NOT!

It was the middle of the night, I was real comfy and had no intention of crawling out from under that bed.

I don't like my box anymore... under the bed is just lovely.

You hit your head on the bed one more time and you are toast - she murmured crossly.

Alpha was snoring and she did not want to wake him.

Blinked in agreement. Sure... right... we'll see about that.

Thankfully the rest of the night passed peacefully.

The birds started tweeting and I made some "let me out" noises.

Mom leaned over, un-velcroed the boards on her side of the bed and sleepily relocated the boxes of stuff that she had positioned there to try to block me from barging under the bed.

Leopard crawled out... wagged my tail and slurped her face.

Good morning! Come come. Up you get. Time to widdle.

But it's only quarter to five, she groaned. AND... it's Saturday.

What's your point? I wagged back. Yawned loudly and scratched my ear.

Sssshhhh... she said. Everybody else is sleeping.

Eventually she dragged her lazy bod out of bed and carried me downstairs.

Such lazy humans - normally they are up nice and early.

How come they sleep so late over weekends?

Soaking up the beauty

What wonders a little (or a lot of) rain can do for nature. I was strolling around in Bakerton and before I knew it, I was lost in a forest of grass and reeds and some other stuff! Even on my hind porky paws I couldn't see over the tall grass. I love the way everything changes when it rains. It's so beautiful.

A day in my life Chantelle Geyer

I graduated from the Metropolitan State University of Denver in the USA with a journalism degree in 2010 and just recently started my journey with the Addie. I knew at a young age that I wanted to work in this field and look forward to getting to know Springs and becoming a voice for the community.

Students push school gender policy

A Cape Town high school recently announced it will take gender references out of its school policy, allowing the same hair and jewellery rules to apply to both boys and girls.

The decision was reached after extensive consultation with parents who were strongly in favour of the amendment, but then received a massive backlash on social media from the public days later.

Well I say good for them, good for the school, good for the students and good for our country.

This decision followed closely on the heels of a scandal in Pretoria, where black girls accused their school's administration of racism by restricting the ways in which they can wear their natural hair.

Only after protests did the school amend its code of conduct.

I, personally, find it refreshing for a school to be proactive and to voluntarily create opportunities to foster diversity.

It baffles me that South African schools are so hell-bent on forcing children to fit into a little box.

A conservative box with archaic ideas at that.

Look, I grasp the importance of conformity in schools and I definitely think there is merit in requiring children to wear school uniforms, especially since teenagers place this self-imposed pressure on themselves to be perfect and to fit in while also still standing out.

Many teens struggle with their self-esteem while navigating their pubescent years, so requiring them to look the same, eliminates less-fortunate children from feeling inferior.

And although uniforms are expensive, buying 'weekend clothes' for every day of the month, will surely crack even the heftiest of bank accounts.

Having attended middle- and high school in the United States, I know first-hand the circus that daily civvies can cause.

It really is just like in the movies.

You have the preppy group, the punks, goths, hippies, nerds, the girls who leave little to the imagination and unfortunately children feel obliged to pick a pack and subsequently conform to the group's culture, often times confirming the negative stereotypes associated with them.

Race and gender equality were two of the most contested and controversial issues of the recent US election, which may seem unrelated to this school's decision but we cannot view the matter in isolation.

It is incumbent on schools to allow children the freedom to exercise their basic human right of being who they choose to be.

Also, it is worth pointing out that several studies have concluded that students who are happy, achieve better grades.

So if it makes the boys happy to have long hair, then let them.

Times are changing people, and if the majority of parents and students support the measure, then I commend the school for spearheading such a bold and progressive movement.

We should be encouraging and even celebrating individuality in our children, not suppressing it.

Make your voice heard

With the Springs SPCA facing an imminent threat of closure due to lack of funds, the Addie asked what people think of the matter. This is what they had to say:

Lyndie Magor:

"Hulle moet hulle diens verbeter. Ek wil nie hê die DBV moet toe maak nie, maar hulle moet harder werk daaraan."

Elizabeth Kabede:

"I don't want them to close down. They are helping the animals of Springs, something needs to be done."

Gladys Ravele:

"I won't be sad if they close down, because I don't feel they are helping the animals in their care very much."

Bronwen Thomsen:

"I feel they have some drastic work to do and need to step up their game. Currently they have nothing to offer Springs."

Join colourful carnival

Colour in The Sun, inspired by the traditional Holi colour festival in India, ventures to Carnival City on December 16, National Reconciliation Day.

Colour in the Sun will bring together thousands of colour-crazy revellers for an afternoon of spectacular entertainment, sets by well-known DJs and tons of powder infused fun.

Confirmed artists and DJs include Dj Zan D, Infinite Boys, Major League Dj's, Dimplez, Sterra on Percussion, Shorts Da Deejay, and Morgan Beat Box.

More featured artists will be announced in the coming weeks.

"Celebrate National Reconciliation Day with awesome music, a super charged vibe and loads of colour. Laugh, dance and play the day away in the spirit of togetherness for which this international festival is renowned," says Michelle Smith, the marketing manager at Carnival City.

Colour in the Sun is a premier colour festival promoting unity and equality while celebrating youth, togetherness and fun.

This festival derives from an ancient Hindu festival celebrating springtime, love and, of course, colours.

It has recently spread from its origins in India and Nepal to parts of Europe as a non-religious day to reflect equality and togetherness.

Against a festive backdrop of song and dance participants play, chase and colour each other with bright, dry powders.

All colours consist of cornstarch and an aromatic substance. The colourants differentiate per colour.

Aromatic substances include lavender, lavender oil, sage, dill, chamomile, rosemary, rosemary oil and acetic acid.

Revellers will be seen sporting paints in red, green, pink, orange, blue and yellow.

Garden of Lights to dazzle

It is time again to step into a festive wonderland at the Garden of Lights, located in the gardens at the five-star Peermont D'oreale Grande Hotel at Emperors Palace.

The lights will shine from December 2 to January 8.

This magical event will feature dazzling lights and colourful characters that have delighted countless visitors over the years and promise to welcome many more.

There will be an entry fee into the garden of R25 per person, with all proceeds from ticket sales to be donated to the Cancer Association of South Africa (Cansa) and the Peermont Children's and Education Trusts which benefit various community development programmes.

Booking is essential.

"Many of our families have been affected by the horrible scourge of cancer and have lost loved ones to this disease.

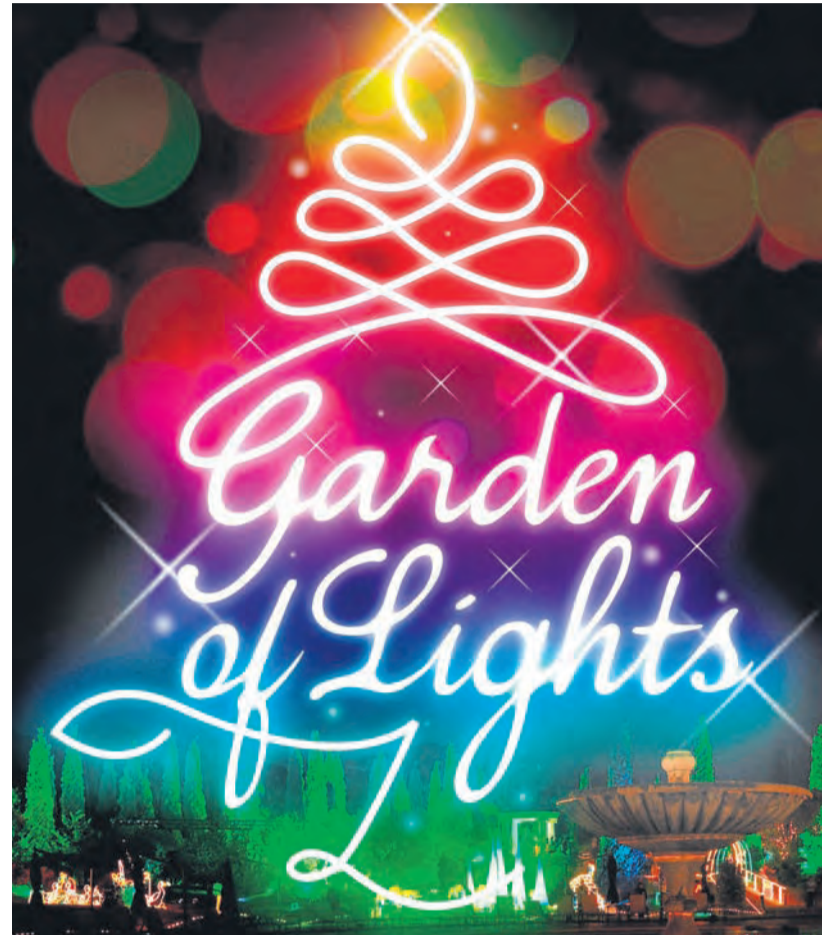

"And many South Africans are unable to afford education for their children.

"This is our way of ensuring that a beautiful experience, the Garden of Lights, can work for a brighter future for many," says Mark Jakins, Peermont marketing and regional operations executive.

"We are proud of our association with Cansa and Peermont Trusts for children's education and upliftment.

"Please join us over the festive season to spread a little cheer."

The lights spectacle will make for a perfect night out for individuals and families, and younger visitors to the event will be particularly pleased with a variety of exciting funfair rides.

The festive Garden of Lights is set to thrill both young and old once again when the lights are turned on in December.

Provided by Happyland, some of the rides include Jump and Smile, Break Dancer, Freeway Fantasy, Helter Skelter and the all-time favourite Ferris wheel.

Stalls selling a variety of food and beverages will also be available, including festive season paraphernalia.

As a keepsake, children can also have a photograph taken with Santa Claus at Santa's Grotto.

The gates will be open from 7pm to 10pm daily, weather permitting.

In the event of overcast and rainy weather, ticket holders will be contacted via SMS about moving their bookings to a different date.

Kings and Queens of Comedy and All takes to Sandton Convention Centre

Riaad Moosa will host the Kings and Queens of Comedy and All comedy showcase as part of the Blu Blood Bollywood experience next Saturday.

Indian comedy giants will join forces for a hilarious performance at the Sandton Convention Centre next Saturday.

Kings and Queens of Comedy and All will showcase a royal line-up of some of the best in the business, including host Riaad Moosa, Muthu Murugan, Pravesh Mungaldave, Simmi Areff, Farhan Esat, Sans Moonsammy, Yaseen Barnes and Afzal Khan along with Leeanda Reddy and Keru Kisten.

The show is part of a spectacular three-day cultural event, the Blu Blood Bollywood Experience, which will tantalise the senses with street performers, local and international fashion and Eastern cuisine.

An explosion of colour and energy, the annual lifestyle and entertainment extravaganza is highly anticipated by the Indian community and is sure to excite young and old.

"It enlists local and international entertainers, celebrities and the likes to conclude the year in a Bollywood extravaganza, from the Mela fashion shows to South Africa's comedy greats, the best Indian cuisine and the finale being the biggest names in the Bollywood industry," says Blu Blood CEO Shaaista Khan Osman.

Blu Blood MD, Osman Osman, adds that "this is one memorable event certainly not to be missed".

What's On is a community bulletin board for non-profit organisations or events. To have your event featured, send details including your name, surname and contact number before 11am on a Friday, to annar@caxton.co.za If any of these details are missing, the notice will not appear.

What's showing on the big screen?

The Snow Queen 2

Starring: Alexey Tsitsilin, Sharlot Copley, Bella Thorne, Isabelle Fuhrman and Sean Bean.
Director: Aleksey Tsitsilin.

The trolls have developed a taste for freedom. Having played a major role in theirs, Orm has become a hero to them all. However, this is not enough for him. Comically exaggerating his exploits and achievements, he spins a web of lies, claiming that he, personally, defeated the Snow Queen, and that he is destined to marry the princess, inherit great power and riches.

Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them

Starring: Eddie Redmayne, Colin Farrell, Ezra Miller, Jon Voight, Ron Perlman, Gemma Chan, Katherine Waterston, Samantha Morton and Carmen Ejogo.
Director: David Yates.

In 1926, Newt Scamander has just completed a global excursion to find and document an extraordinary array of magical creatures. Arriving in New York for a brief stop-over, he might have come and gone without incident, were it not for a No-Maj (American for Muggle) named Jacob, a misplaced magical case, and the escape of some of Newt's fantastic beasts, which could spell trouble for both the wizarding and No-Maj worlds.

Maggie's Plan

Starring: Greta Gerwig, Julianne Moore, Ethan Hawke, Bill Hader, Maya Rudolph, Wallace Shawn and Alex Morf.
Director: Rebecca Miller.

Maggie's plan to have a baby on her own is derailed when she falls in love with John, a married man, destroying his volatile marriage to the brilliant and impossible Georgette. But one daughter and three years later, Maggie is out of love and in a quandary, what do you do when you suspect your man and his ex-wife are actually perfect for each other?

Vir die voëls

Starring: Simoné Nortmann, Francois Jacobs, Lara Kinnear, Bennie Fourie, Elize Cawood, Neels van Jaarsveld and Nicola Hanekom.
Director: Quentin Krog.

This story takes you back to the late 70s in the midst of the Border War, when women rights barely existed and marriageable men were still troopies. The story of a tomboy who can't understand how her life path led her to the alter and who is uncertain if she is making the right decision.

A night to remember at Gold Reef City

Born To Perform will take to the stage at Gold Reef City's Lyric Theatre on December 10.

The platform is back to stage its annual gala concert with two performances, the first at 2pm and the second at 7.30pm.

The theme of the gala is 'Today's stars performing with the stars of tomorrow'. Joining Alexandra May and Ashlinn Gray on stage is Idols finalist Loyiso Gijana, singing Gravity with 14-year-old Keely Crocker.

The concerts will include video performances from Louise Carver and Ard Matthews, performing Just Jinjer's hit Shallow Waters with 13-year-old Joshua Moreira.

The Born To Perform platform held nationwide auditions and has secured some of the most talented children and teens from around South Africa from all fields of music, dance and musical theatre to join these illustrious performers on stage.

Excerpts from new Broadway Musicals will be showcased at the concert such as Hamilton, The Idols finalist Loyiso Gijana.

Waitress and Once with the young performers taking the lead.

Other highlights will include a Beatles tribute, a musical medley from musicals ranging from 1940s to today.

The Born To Perform Gala Concert 2016 is inspired by the annual Royal Variety Show in England.

These local performers will be teaming up with some of SA's favourite artists to show the world what South Africa has to offer.

The evening promises to be a dazzling display of song and dance provided by our leading stars alongside a wide array of budding talent.

Make Christmas magical

It's the most wonderful time of the year - and that's never more true than when you're a mum. Not only do you get to enjoy the festivities for yourself (of course!) but you also get to make it magical for your little ones!

Santa's magic key

Is your child wondering how Santa will get into the house when you don't have a chimney? The answer is as simple as Santa's magic key. Tie an old-fashioned ornate key on your front doorknob and explain that it's a magic key that only works for Santa.

Hang the stockings

Leave your stockings until Christmas Eve and hang them up with the children's help before they go to bed. It will add to the excitement of the evening.

If you don't have stockings or have nowhere to hang them, have the children place pillowcases at the end of their beds.

The night before Christmas

What better book to read on Christmas Eve than 'The Night Before Christmas'?

pathway to make the perfect landing strip for a flying sleigh.

Laugh a lot

Doesn't it seem like your best memories are spent laughing? The holiday season is a time to celebrate love, life and redemption and spend our days with those we love the most. With all the focus on holiday planning and rushing to finish the ever-growing to-do list, Christmas Eve is your chance to finally sit down and enjoy the moment with your family. Because after all, isn't that what it is all about? Take a photo of Santa Dress up as Santa and have someone take a photo of you bending down by the tree, delivering presents whilst the children are fast asleep. If you're going for authenticity, you can move the camera quickly to give it the kind of blur usually seen on photos of Bigfoot.

A pillowcase at the end of a child's bed is a fine substitute if you do not have a stocking for them.

Make sure he knows where to land by making a runway in your garden. Put outdoor fairy lights or battery-powered tea lights either side of your

A nice long bubble bath is the perfect way to calm down your little one before they're supposed to dream of sugar plums.

Tips to keep the little ones calm on Christmas Eve

We all remember what it was like to spend Christmas Eve excitedly bouncing off the walls and annoying our parents.

Instead of having to spend the whole day threatening your children, try these tips to keep the little ones calm this Christmas Eve.

Christmas movie marathon

Bust out all of your favourite classic Christmas movies. Oldies like, It's a Wonderful Life, A Christmas Carol or The Grinch are ideal.

The 'just one gift' tradition

If the whole family is getting a little impatient, you can always bust out the "just one gift" tradition. Everyone gets to open a single present, then you'll all have something to play with on Christmas Eve night.

Bake Santa's cookies

You need some yummy cookies to leave Santa Clause on Christmas Eve, don't you? Well instead of laying out store-bought ones, let your little ones help make homemade cookies for the big guy. They can even spend an hour or two decorating the perfect Christmas tree sugar cookie.

Long bubble baths

There's nothing holiday-inspired about this suggestion. But a nice, long bubble bath is the perfect way to calm down your little one before they're supposed to dream of sugar plums.

Clean out for new toys

If you're in a sneaky mood, tell your children that they can only keep their Christmas toys if they have space in their room for these new gifts. You'll get some serious cleaning done very quickly.

Tour the Christmas lights

It gets everyone out of the house and it's completely free. Drive around different neighbourhoods and check out all the Christmas lights on display. It's entertainment for at least an hour or two.

Play 'ghost of Christmas past'

Gather up the children and spend a little time reminiscing about past Christmases. Talk about your favourite presents, great past memories and special traditions. Pull out the old photo albums to relive all your best holidays.

Celebrating baby's first Christmas

A baby is a great blessing for any parent, but how do you make this time of year special for someone who will not even remember it?

Fact is you will remember, so go for the magic.

Here's what to do, and what to skip, for baby's first Christmas.

You've been through this before

When you got married, you had to figure out how to spend one Christmas with your partner's family and yours every other year. Now that you have a family of your own, this is the year to decide what is yours and what is your parents'. Where will you have the big holiday dinner? Where will you open presents? Make those decisions now and be clear with your families to avoid any hurt feelings later.

Want baby to wake up in their own home on Christmas morning? Invite family members to come to you.

Do some pre-holiday cleaning: Go through clothes and gear and pluck the things baby no longer uses or needs.

Give things to charity, pack them away in storage for the next child, or hand them off

How do you make this time of year special for someone who will not even remember it?

to a pregnant friend.

That way, you will have space for all the new stuff you are about to get.

To ensure that the gifts your baby receives have your seal of approval set up an online wish list for them. Pass it around to the grandparents and others who will be buying gifts.

You have tonnes of people to see but do not forget to make time for naps and playtime. You do not want your baby being miserable in every holiday photo you snap.

Remind too-pushy relatives that scheduling some downtime is a necessity and is non-negotiable.

Start a totally new tradition this year, something that the three of you will do this holiday and then make a lifelong family ritual. Do not stress over trying to do something big.

Let the grandparents go overboard, but you and your partner can get baby just one special thing. Think about a gift that baby will one day treasure as an adult and hopefully pass on to their baby.

But this can also be stressful, from selecting what to wear to getting the children to cooperate, the process can be filled with anxiety and pressure.

Follow these tips to help reduce the stress.

Coordinate outfits but don't match

You've seen it a million times, the entire family wearing the exact same outfit. It's coordinated, but not necessarily sophisticated. First pick a colour scheme, and then add different shades, textures and patterns. Neutrals, which include denim, can and should be mixed in.

Avoid big logos or patterns

When coordinating outfits, avoid anything that will take attention away from the whole point of the photo, the people. The most important thing is to avoid large logos or letters, all colours are okay; just make sure you don't mix too many busy patterns. If you have a striped shirt, wear solid-coloured pants.

Don't wear too much make-up

While you may hear celebrities talk about getting "camera ready," too much make-up for family portraits is never a good idea. Wear eyeliner with your day eyeshadow colour or a brighter lip colour. Make-up should add some focus, not steal the show.

Pick your setting carefully

If you're planning on snapping the photo, choose the setting carefully. Every element is important. The less distracting, the better, simple but picturesque is a good rule of thumb.

Lighting

When coordinating outfits, avoid anything that will take attention away from the whole point of the photo, the people.

Natural lighting is definitely best, not direct sunlight but shade or overcast skies. Just make sure light is on the subjects' faces evenly. Direct sunlight will only cause your subjects to squint and have dark shadows under their eyes.

Forget about saying "cheese"

When prepping children for a family photo, talk about it as something fun, not a task. Mentioning that they're about to have their pictures taken is okay, but telling children how they have to smile when asked is not going to help. Natural emotions are the key. Candid moments are the best to capture real personality, so keep shooting even when your children stop saying "cheese".

Take a lot of pictures

Take 10 or more of the same pose. One will turn out perfect and nine will go in the recycling bin. These digital days you don't have to worry about running out of film.

This is how to have a very merry stress-free Christmas

In theory Christmas is a time filled with joy and celebration.

This is a joyous holiday where you get together with loved ones and catch up, exchange gifts and generally have a good time.

Unfortunately, in practice, it can be a time of great stress and unhappiness. There is so much to do and organise. Sometimes getting together with your extended family can be uncomfortable and even painful.

Here is a plan that will help you to relax a little more this Christmas and hopefully a good time will be had by all.

■ Christmas shopping. Don't leave everything until the last moment. Rushing will just make you tired and more stressed.

Get your Christmas shopping done early so you don't have to spend hours fighting other shoppers for the last doll or Christmas turkey.

Don't over-spend. It is very easy at Christmas time to spend too much and put yourself in a financial hole for a good part of the New Year. Decide before you go shopping how much you can afford to spend and stick to your budget.

Shopping early will help you stick to a budget as you will not be in a last minute panic, picking up anything that may be suitable regardless of the cost.

If money is a little tight for you or your family there are ways you can reduce your spending costs. Together you could decide that all gifts should be handmade or second-hand.

Or you could all decide that each of you will only buy for one other person. Decide between yourselves on an amount that everyone is to spend and then draw names out of a hat to see who you will shop for.

Shop online from the comfort of your own home as you'll not only save time and be less stressed but will probably save money too. Always make sure you buy from reputable online retailers and check that they can deliver before the big day.

Wrap presents as soon as possible after buying them. This will leave one less thing to do on Christmas Eve.

■ Christmas cooking. Again, planning is very important. You don't have to do it all yourself. Ask members of your family to bring something along. This way the chore is shared among many and everyone can feel like they have contributed.

See what preparations can be made a few days beforehand. The plum pudding and mince tarts can be made weeks before. Do what you can, but make sure everything is stored at a safe temperature.

■ Dealing with the unpleasant relatives. At Christmas time we can be thrown together with people we are uncomfortable with. Do your best to be pleasant to them. Alcohol can increase your emotional reactions to any situation so only drink in moderation.

Make sure that you look after yourself with appropriate exercise, relaxation, sleep and a healthy diet on the days leading up to Christmas.

When we are feeling fit and energetic we are able to cope more easily with the ups and downs of life. However, if we are already feeling tired and stressed any little thing can overwhelm us and this can make Christmas more tense and tiresome.

Remember it's your Christmas too so try to relax and have fun, laugh and be merry. If you do find others around you difficult then try to rise above the situation. If things don't go to plan try not to worry too much, instead laugh about them and make them into fun memories that you can talk about during Christmases to come.

Themba Boqo proudly patrols Sweetpea Street in Bakerton, as part of the community's efforts to reduce crime in their neighbourhood.

Bakerton community fighting crime

After months of criminal activity, the Bakerton community has decided to take the fight against crime into their own hands and has introduced visibility guarding, a tactic where residents privately employ guards to patrol the streets.

Deputy chairman of the Springs Community Police Forum (CPF), Ahmed Chouglay, has been a resident of Bakerton for over 30 years, and says that since the initiative started six months ago, the entire neighbourhood has been incident-free.

He says the community came together about six months ago and decided to employ security guards who are each responsible for one street.

"Before we started this, the crime was very bad," he says. Ward councillor Ramesh Sheodin agrees with Ahmed and says that there has been a high number of murders and robberies in the area.

Ahmed estimates there to be around 30 guards on duty in the Bakerton community at the moment.

Although the guards are unarmed, residents of each street have a WhatsApp group where any suspicious activity or issues can be reported.

He says the majority of the community supports the initiative and they also work closely with the CPF and the SAPS.

Themba Boqo has been responsible for Sweetpea Street for approximately six months and says he will fight any intruders.

"There are lots of children walking in the streets and it is my job to keep them safe too," he says.

Expert Opinion

Criminal law in a murder case: Mauritius vs SA

The death of Springs teenager Mundolene Vosloo (17) during a family holiday in Mauritius, on October 5, has had local questioning the path the case might take and how this differs to the manner in which it would be handled in South Africa.

Mundolene's stepmother Marietjie Vosloo (39) was arrested on the day of the teen's death, after she allegedly assaulted Mundolene shortly before the teenager collapsed and died.

According to Springs criminal lawyer Katy van der Merwe (who is not involved in the case), Marietjie could be held in custody for up to a year, while the Mauritian police and prosecutors gather information and build a case against her.

Van der Merwe says the Supreme Court in Mauritius will lean heavily on the testimony of the minor boy (Marietjie's son) who was present at the time, as well as on the evidence in the coroner's report.

"The police, at this point, feel that they have sufficient evidence against the accused to lodge a provisional charge of manslaughter.

"Taking into account that there was a history of fighting between the stepmother and the deceased and the evidence of the boy that the stepmother was acting aggressively the entire trip, one could presume that the court may impose a stiff sentence in this case," she says.

She claims, should Marietjie be found guilty of manslaughter she could face up to 18 years imprisonment, less than the sentence for murder which can be up to 45 years in that country.

The Mauritian law, Section 150A of the Criminal Code, states "Where under any enactment other than the Criminal Code, a court is empowered or required to pass a sentence of penal servitude for life, the sentence may, at the discretion of the court, be for a term of not less than three years and not exceeding 60 years."

Should the court hand down a prison sentence the accused will probably be transferred to the Women's Prison which became operational on May 11, 1951.

Mundolene Vosloo (17) died in Mauritius after she was allegedly assaulted by her stepmother.

South African law
If the accused was convicted of culpable homicide (sometimes referred to as manslaughter) in South Africa, the court would be bound by certain minimum sentences, taking certain factors into account, as with the Oscar Pistorius case, where the law leans towards mitigating factors when imposing a sentence.

Other circumstances to be taken into account are the accused's personal circumstances and the crime committed.

There are no degrees of murder in the South African law.

The only distinction made is that murder requires intention, whereas culpable homicide requires negligence.

"In SA, the woman would probably be charged with murder. "The attorney would be faced with arguing that she didn't intend to kill the teenager or she didn't foresee her action would lead to the death of the teenager."

Van der Merwe says the Mauritian authority sees the case in an extremely serious light, and would seek a harsh sentence.

"The island authorities don't shy away from asking for life sentences for drug mules, and will probably not ask for anything less in this case," says van der Merwe.

Extradition

The Mauritian Government is more than willing to release South African prisoners to our authorities, but the SA government must sign a prisoner transfer agreement which is governed by international and domestic law.

However, SA is one of two countries in the world that does not bring prisoners home to serve their sentences here.

Mauritius follows the general process of the Commonwealth Scheme for the Rendition of Fugitive Offenders.

"This means that since there is the absence of such a treaty in SA, there is no duty on our government to extradite," says van der Merwe.

However, some solace can be taken from the fact that Mauritius does not apply capital punishment.

This matter was debated in March 2010, when the Mauritian prime minister announced that he was considering reintroducing the death penalty.

"The island's sentences are therefore extremely harsh," she says.

Van der Merwe says the law governing bail in Mauritius is very similar to British law, which means that the accused could be denied bail, should she apply for bail.

Currently the legal system is a combination of French and English systems.

Zamani Primary School prefects for 2017.

Principal Selby Nkosi with new Headboy Sakhile Putswana, Headgirl Amahle Mbatha, Deputy Headboy Siyabonga Sithole and Deputy Headgirl Sphiwe Masondo.

Zamani Primary School's awards ceremony

The Zamani Primary School held its Annual Awards Ceremony at the school last Friday.

School principal Selby Nkosi shares that throughout the year, the school has taken part in different activities organised by the District; and learners and teachers represented the school very well.

This also helped academic results and learner performance improves each term.

"The purpose of rewarding academic excellence, extra mural activities and co-curricular activities, was therefore to acknowledge and honour the learners for their hard work.

"It was also to show them that hard work does indeed pay off," he says.

In Foundation Phase, Intermediate Phase and Senior Phase, certificates of achievement were awarded to learners who'd achieved the highest mark in each subject.

Medals were also awarded to the top learners who'd achieved the highest overall aggregate in each grade.

Further special awards were given to learners who'd performed outstandingly in extra mural or co-curricular activities.

Nkosi says on behalf of the staff, they congratulate Lindokuhle Mahlangu, who was the top learner in Grade Seven - as she received certificates in English, social sciences, economic management sciences and natural sciences.

In addition, they congratulate next year's Grade Seven leadership which is as follows: Headboy - Sakhile Putswana; headgirl - Amahle Mbatha; deputy headboy - Siyabonga Sithole and deputy headgirl - Sphiwe Masondo.

Prefects are: Manqoba Phore, Lebogang Shabangu, Pabalello Mngomezulu, Nkosinathi Mnguni, Sanelisiwe Molala, Noluthando Mnisi, Lebone Moloi, Zanele Mlambo, Nondumiso Daile, Ramonyatsi Qalo, Yolisa Ndlovu and Noluthando Mhlanga.

Nkosi explains that the reason why they've chosen to have prefects for the first time at the school, is to assist teachers in maintaining order in the school, by using peer guidance.

Furthermore, prefects can be role models in activating leadership skills amongst fellow learners.

"My heartfelt gratitude to all parents who were involved with the school's activities; making sure that their children enjoyed what is offered by the school.

"With the end of the year ahead of us, I would like to take this opportunity to wish everyone connected and involved with Zamani school a well deserved break," he concludes.

An icy breeze woke her, saw her win writing competition

Winner of this year's Caxton Writing Competition, Robyn Jordaan from Springs Girls High School with Caxton's Daniel Seleme and Schalk van Wyk, one of the sponsors.

Robyn Jordaan, a Grade Nine student from Springs Girls' High School could not believe it when she was crowned the Caxton Writing Competition Winner of 2016.

This year, Caxton Local Newspapers, together with a local company, gave teenagers between Grades Eight and 12, in Ekurhuleni and the City of Johannesburg, an opportunity to win a laptop.

To be part of this amazing competition, students were requested to describe, in 600 or fewer words, how writing has helped them in their everyday lives.

"I am weird," says Robyn.

"Even my mother says so.

"Sometimes, I will talk about something that I think is completely normal, but my mother will listen with a horrified expression."

The Caxton Creative Writing Competition aims not only to equip South Africa's youth with the tools to nurture their creative talent, but also to expose them to career opportunities available in advertising, journalism and media, when they have basic creative writing skills.

Therefore, this year's winner will have the opportunity to be mentored by well-known and trained editors, who will assist them in improving their craft.

"Writing stories helps me express my ominous ideas that my friends and family often do not appreciate hearing," adds Robyn.

A facilitator of the competition, Daniel Seleme, says the competition keeps growing every year.

"The competition has showcased the great and unfounded talent that we have in the country.

"We urge all writers to continue following their dreams and aiming to become better through writing," Daniel says.

The winners were chosen by a judging panel.

The judges' decision is final and no correspondence will be entered into.

The students and teachers of the Springs Tamil School are very pleased with their achievements.

Tamil school boasts with 14 distinctions

Springs Tamil School learners accomplished a 100% pass rate with general distinctions, in the recent South African National Tamil School Exams.

The Bhairavi Sungum of Springs Tamil School learners wrote the exams compiled by the South African Tamil Federation's Education Desk, administered by Dr Bull Murugan.

"It's always a pleasure to test these children in the Sungum - and to note that the lowest mark achieved was 90%.

"I would like to compliment the administrators, teacher and students of the Sungum on these sterling results," says Murugan.

Kesavan Pillay, chairman of the Bhairavi Sungum of Springs, says they are passionate about the Tamil language and culture.

Kesavan also wrote the Tamil school exams, together with the Sungum's secretary Poovershree Pillay; both achieving 100%.

"Our gratitude and accolades go to our teacher, Saranam Naicker, who's always produced the best results up to matric.

They're also grateful for the financial assistance of Dr Mickey Chetty, of the International Movement of Tamil Culture.

The following learners each received 100%:

Kesavan Pillay (Grade Two) and his wife Poovershree Pillay (Grade Three); Dinera Govender (Grade Eight), Shekinah Govender (Grade Eight), Kaley Chetty (Grade Two), Tharun Pillay (Grade One), Shanitha Govender (Grade

two) and Mayuri Pillay (Grade Four).

Thesighan Padiachy (Grade Six), Kumeshnie Kasaven (Grade Four) and the youngest learner in the school, Jetania Naidoo (Grade Four), all obtained 99%.

Keyoran Naidoo (Grade Six), Siveshen Singh (Grade Seven) and Vareshen Pather (Grade Seven) all obtained 98%.

Kesavan says the Bhairavi Sungum of Springs is committed to uplifting the Hindu language and culture and urges fellow members of Indian communities to get involved in maintaining with passion, the language of their descendants, be it Gujarati, Hindi, Tamil or Telugu.

For more information contact Poovershree on 072 693 7808 or Priya Govender on 062 254 5516.

Our neighbours' opinions

This is what residents in our neighbouring town of Brakpan have to say about the issue of the Ekurhuleni Metro moving plastic squatters to Location Street in Brakpan:

Jacques Wessels: "Ja, een groot klug man. Nou lees ek 'n ontwikkelaar wil daar townhouses oprig. Wie in sy normale verstand gaan 'n huis oorkant 'n ashoop koop en dan was daar myn bedrywighede jare terug?"

Lelanie Naudé: "Has anyone noticed how many squatters are already living next to Location Road? They seem to be increasing daily and looks like they are also busy collecting plastic."

Ann Sinclair: "Drive past there, you'll see there is already a huge amount of squatters and they are getting more by the day with or without 'paperwork'. It's happened and will be impossible to stop."

Carmen Boucher: "What about the children at the nearby schools who already have health problems? Now they will be inhaling the burning plastic fumes."

Shaun Klinkenberg: "Ons soek antwoorde. Die DA het ons verseker hulle skuif nie na dié kant toe nie."

Sanet Oosthuizen: "Wat?! Het hulle nou heeltemal kens geraak? Raak ontslae van hulle, moenie die probleem verskuif nie."

Rina Roets: "Daai is een helse gesondheidsrisiko en moet vinnig verwyder word."

Morné Klinkenberg: "Ek dink ons moet 'n dag reël en almal bymekaar kom en hulle self evict. Ek't vergeet, net vier mense gaan opdaag."

Step three: Comb it downwards with a comb that has closely spaced teeth. This will make an even trim easier.

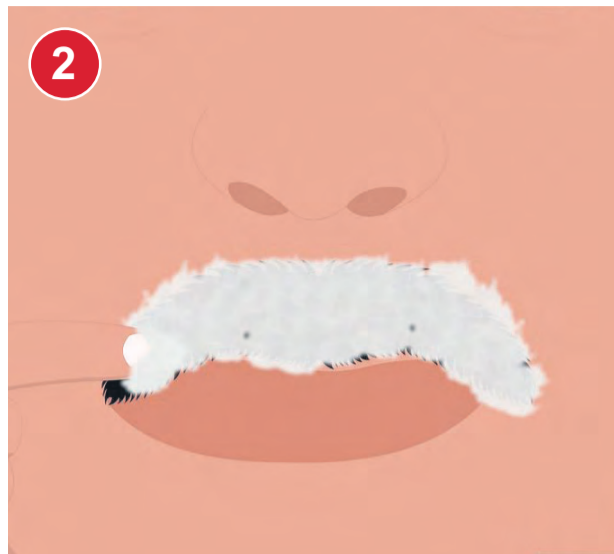

Step five: If necessary, use a trimmer or a pair of scissors and a comb to remove the bulk of the moustache.

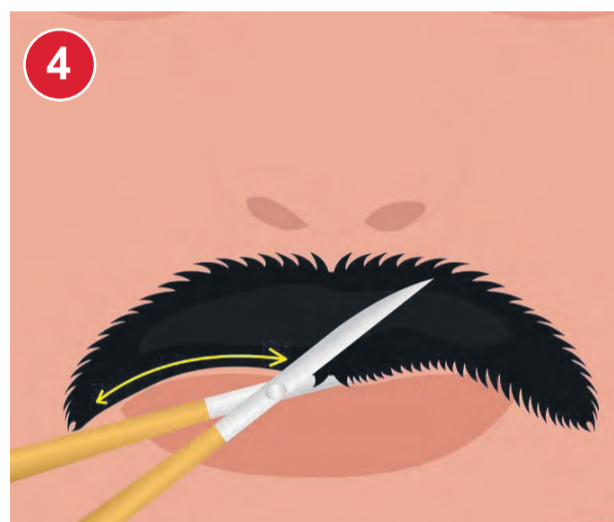

Step seven: Lastly, comb your moustache again to see if it is evenly trimmed.

Step four: Carefully trim your moustache parallel with your lip using a sharp pair of scissors and continue to follow the shape of your mouth.

Step six: If you want more definition to your moustache, shave the area surrounding your moustache carefully.

Easy prostate cancer testing

Men have been petrified of prostate cancer testing for ages, but they need not fear the violating act any longer.

For many years, the digital rectum examination (DRE) was the only testing method available, but thanks to advancements in medicine, a blood test, known as the prostate-specific antigen (PSA) test, is now the preferred screening approach.

The test measures the level of the protein cells released by the prostate gland where a reading higher than four nanograms per milliliter might indicate an increased chance of cancer being present.

"This method has been around for roughly 15 years but the problem is that people simply don't know about it," explains Dr Henry Davel of the Springs Medicross centre.

He says prostate cancer is something he takes very seriously.

He tells the stories of three Springs doctors who died of prostate cancer because they waited too long to get tested.

His message to men over the age of 45 years is to not delay testing under any circumstances.

When the clinical symptoms start, it is often times too late already, he says.

According to Davel, the most tell-tale sign of possible prostate cancer is difficulty urinating which is due to the position of the prostate in relation to the bladder.

Davel also emphasises that times are changing due to the evolution of our lifestyles, and that men might need to start getting tested earlier than the recommended age.

"When I started practising medicine, endometriosis was found in women over 50 years where as now it is being diagnosed in girls as young as 15," he says.

The blood test is available at most Springs doctors' offices and laboratories and the cost is covered by most medical aids.

Springs Medicross doctor Henry Davel urges all men over the age of 45 years to make use of the prostate screening blood test, which has been available for many years.

The dangers behind untreated cancer

November is drawing to a close and being known as Prostate Cancer Awareness Month, it's one of the most important awareness months of the year.

Men often turn a blind eye to the common cancer they may fall victim to, as the whole process seems daunting.

During November, men are continuously urged to go for screenings to find out what the prognosis is.

Many men ignore this. According to WebMD, prostate cancer is a common cancer affecting older men.

It usually takes years to become large enough to cause any problems, although it can grow quickly.

What happens when men don't go for regular check-ups for prostate cancer?

WebMD states that when prostate cancer spreads beyond the prostate, it goes first to the lymph nodes in the pelvis and then on to the bones, lungs or other organs.

Advanced side effects to prostate cancer are:

- Impotence, which is the inability to achieve or maintain an erection.

- Incontinence, which is the inability to control urine flow.

- Infertility, caused by most treatments for prostate cancer.

- Pain and weakening bones. This condition causes pain and weakens bones, making them prone to fracturing.

Although prostate cancer is not a leading cause of death, it continues to be a serious disease and should not be taken lightly.

Jaco Potgieter from the Springs Old Boys Third League cricket team readies himself to catch the ball during their match against Boksburg on Saturday.

Third League wear armbands for Butch

The Springs Old Boys Third League played against Boksburg on Saturday at the Springs Old Boys A field.

Boksburg batted first and scored 177 runs, all out.

Springs Old Boys scored 80 runs, all out, losing by 97 runs.

The team wore black armbands in memory of Butch Edwards, who recently died after suffering a heart attack on the pitch while playing a match against Benoni Northerns.

The team says Butch was a big role model for them as he had many years' experience on the cricket field.

The top performer of the day was Jaques Wessels with seven overs and six wickets for 44 runs.

The Bakerton cricket players also had an active cricket weekend.

The Bakerton Promotion League played on Sunday against Wattville and lost by four wickets.

Bakerton managed to score 155 runs for 10 in 32.3 overs while Wattville scored 156 runs for six in 33.3 overs.

The Bakerton Director League played on Sunday against the Springs Old Boys cricket team and lost by 49 runs.

The Springs Old Boys team scored 182 runs for 10 in 36.5 overs while the Bakerton team scored 133 runs for four in 29 overs.

They are going for gold

Two fighters from the Rio Grappling Club, in Springs, recently competed at the Gauteng Provincial Championships' third leg, in Alberton.

The Gauteng Provincial Championships are hosted three times a year, this being the third and final tournament of the year.

At the last tournament (leg three), the final points are given to each athlete and to each club for the overall winner.

Stefan Pretorius, one of Springs's professional mixed martial arts (MMA) fighters, and Kyle Pretorius (11), received gold by winning their divisions on the day.

The clubs are rated by the points scored by the students.

"This was the first leg Kyle and I competed in this year, but our goal as a club is to compete in all three legs next year and chase that number one spot," says Stefan.

Stefan Pretorius (left) and Kyle Pretorius both received gold medals in the Gauteng Provincial Championships.

Runners kicked off at exactly 8am on Saturday morning for the start of the 5km Parkrun race.

Springs hosts Parkrun

The parkrun event was held at the grounds of Horse and Hound on Paul Kruger Highway on Saturday.

The chilly early morning temperatures seemed to encourage the runners and walkers.

Some of the runners came with their dogs for the 5km run which starts exactly at 8am, an important point for all parkrun events.

Springs Striders Mariette Rossouw and Leani van Wyk were the event directors.

Bruce Fordyce, who gave an encouraging speech before the race kicked off, also took part in the parkrun.

Matsobane (42) and Sherly (36) Thupi from Payneville say this was their fifth parkrun event, adding that they love the parkrun events and will continue doing them as long as they can.

Mariette explains that an average parkrun time is about 20 to 26 minutes for the fast runners, 27 to 35 minutes for the average runners and 40 minutes to an hour for the walkers.

First runner home Michael Pienaar (21) from Boksburg completed the 5km course in 15 minutes and 36 seconds, much to the delight of the event directors who met him close to the finish line and ran with him until the end.

Corlize Stoltz (12) was the first woman runner to make the finish line.

A passion for the game

Mighty Mokwena (pictured) and Benny Mtsweni are regulars at the Springs Country Golf Club. Mighty and Benny spend their Saturdays on the golf course, playing for the love of golf and say they would play every day for the rest of their lives and they'd be only too happy.

Fortuner and Hilux mildly updated

> SEAN NURSE

It seems like just a few months ago that the Toyota Hilux and Fortuner ranges were released locally. Oh, wait, it was a few months ago. Anyway, the Japanese brand has introduced a few changes to its Fortuner and the Hilux SRX models. You may remember us mentioning this in a previous edition, however, we now had a chance to drive these two newcomers.

→ WHY CHANGE THE SRX?

I was wondering the same thing; I mean the new Hilux range has seen Toyota improve its market share to 34% in 2016 versus 30% in 2015. Nevertheless, it was when we had a look at the one-ton bakkie segment sales in detail, that we notice where Toyota has identified room for change.

You see, the Hilux is leading the single cab segment by quite some way despite the segment being down overall, however in the extra and double cab segments, things are a lot closer in terms of sales.

The Ford Ranger is right on the heels of the Hilux with the majority of double cab Rangers sold being the more basic 2.2 TDCi manual XL, while the best-selling Hilux double cab is the top-end 2.8 GD-6 auto 4x4.

Therefore, if Toyota wants to compete with the sales of the more basic Ranger, it would need to enhance its SRX offering, which is the entry point to the double cab Hilux range.

→ WHAT'S NEW WITH HILUX SRX?

The most important part of the SRX enhancement is the fact that all models now feature a wide-body construction. This means that these models now receive an integrated over-fender, mirror-housed indicators and a wider front bumper, which allows this basic version to resemble the more expensive Raider.

There are also new 17-inch alloy wheels with fatter 265/65/R17 rubber for a more attractive look. All SRX models, from single to extra and double cab variants along with the 2.7-litre petrol and 2.4 GD-6 turbodiesel, receive these updates without any price increase.

→ WHY FORTUNER?

Much like the Hilux, the new Fortuner has been a runaway success in the SUV segment, outselling key rivals from Ford and Chevrolet by quite some margin. The popularity of these models cannot be ignored with over 1 000 new Fortuner's on our roads each month. Toyota decided to implement small changes throughout the range to enhance the product slightly.

→ SO WHAT'S NEW?

The 2.8 GD-6 and V6 Fortuner models now ditch the 17-inch wheels in favour of 18-inch machine-finished items, while the more basic 2.7-litre petrol and 2.4 GD-6 get leather seats as opposed to the cloth items previously offered.

Renault Mégane GT is all show and go

> CHARL BOSCH

@CharlBosch

SOUTH Africans are notorious for being a hard bunch to please when it comes to cars, especially when dismissing perceptions about a certain brand compared to the one whose model stands in their driveway.

Still very much advancing on the comeback trail, no brand has quite managed to replicate the same success shown by Renault over the last few years.

Headed by the Clio, Sandero II and Duster ranges, with the recent additions of the Captur and Kadjar helping to strengthen its foothold in the local market even further, the French marque has now more than ever made it clear it deserves to be taken seriously against rivals from Japan, Germany and South Korea.

With the introduction of the fourth generation Mégane to the hotly contested C-segment however, Renault has once more put its neck on the line as its aims to not only provide a credible rival to the likes of Golf, Civic, Focus and Astra, but to shun any lasting memories of the horrendous resale value and service history that blighted previous generations.

On first glance, you cannot help but be stunned at the latest effort from chief designer, Laurens van den Acker. Inspired to a large extent by the Talisman sedan, the exterior, apart from the stunning Iron Blue hue our range-topping GT tester arrived in, adopts a more muscular appearance than before with a combination of strong lines, those striking C-shaped headlights with integrated daytime LED's, black honeycomb grille, deep front air intake and 18-inch diamond cut alloy wheels.

Just as impressive, the somewhat bloated rear end of the outgoing model makes for a stubbier yet angular rump, highlighted by a subtle boot spoiler, chrome RenaultSport and GT badging, satin silver diffuser and lights running almost the full width of the body.

Inside, the interior exhibits a distinctly upmarket and modern feel with soft touch plastics on most surfaces, a seven-inch TFT instrument cluster, sporty blue inserts and stitching on the gear lever and handbrake, chrome detailing on the steering wheel, centre console and gear lever, and a grippy leather steering wheel.

It is not all good though with some of the finishes lower down, especially around the cupholders feeling somewhat cheap and plasticky, however, the general fit-and-finish is top notch and classy.

Perhaps the most impressive aspect of the GT's interior, apart from the incredibly comfortable Alcantara sport seats and those oversized grin-inducing gearshift paddles, is the reworked R-Link infotainment system that features a tablet-like 8.7-inch touch screen display.

As well as incorporating satellite navigation developed by TomTom and hosting most of the functions for the climate control and sound system, the setup proved tricky at first, but soon became a doddle to use with the Bluetooth connection to my smartphone taking less than 30 seconds to hook-up.

Some interesting features of the system, dubbed Multi-sense, includes configurable user profiles, ability to adjust the engine sound, a choice of colours for the ambient lighting and the obligatory drive mode selector with four choices which we will get to later.

In spite of its sporty persona, the GT is still very much a family hatch at heart, meaning it comes with a spacious boot that measures 384 litres or 1 247 litres with the 60/40 rear seats folded down. There are also good levels of rear head and leg room for passengers. A further plus is the 17-inch alloy spare hidden underneath the boot board.

Given its range-topping status, the GT wants for little when it comes to creature comforts, with notable items including heated front seats, push button start, keyless entry, auto on/off lights, panoramic sunroof, cruise control, rear parking sensors, Hill Start Assist, six airbags and optional Blind Spot Assist and Park Assist.

If we were to knit pick, the absence of a reverse camera, given the GT's rather lofty R449 900 price tag, rates as the only blemish on its list of mod-cons, although this will become available at a later stage.

It is however when you press the starter button and slot the seven-speed EDC dual clutch box into Drive that the lack of a camera and the Tupperware centre console becomes of little significance.

Powered by the same M5T 1.6-litre turbo-charged engine as the Clio RS, albeit reworked to produce 151 kW and 280 Nm, the GT responds with immediate effect when you punch it with little to no turbo lag and a relentless surge of grunt.

Press the RS button underneath the infotainment display however, and everything changes. As earlier mentioned, the GT offers a choice of four driving modes; Neutral, Comfort, Sport and Perso that adjust throttle response, steering feedback, gear changes and even changes the backlighting on the instrument cluster.

Although left in Neutral for most of its weeklong stay, selecting Sport and taking manual control of the gearbox provided some hints of what to expect from the forthcoming RS. Floor it, and the surge becomes a flood of power with the box shrugging off its abysmal showing in the Clio RS by being quick and precise with each tug of the paddles.

If the performance is not impressive enough, the ride is especially commendable given that the GT still makes do with a torsion-beam rear suspension. It was only upset by really bad patches of road and felt composed, with refinement, engine and road noise also being well dented.

A further boon is the fitment of Renault's 4Control four-wheel steering system which not only helps in tight convices, but gives the GT a planted feel when you stick into a corner.

Achingly good looking, loaded with a tech and a powertrain guaranteed to keep the smiles coming, the Renault Mégane GT makes for a truly impressive package that justifies its designation to a tee. Granted, some might frown at the hefty price and opt for the cheaper mid-range GT-Line, the GT nonetheless stands out in more ways than just the colour of its skin. ● ad

BIKERS CHANGE YOUR ATTITUDE

Dear Editor

I'm concerned over the behavior of our brothers and sisters riding bikes. They have a tendency of clocking their bikes from one robot to another even in urban areas where there is a high risk of people getting knocked down.

The high revs they make in-between cars is also irritating as there are people with different sicknesses out there that do not need a sudden noise. Babies sleeping in cars are awakened by these "awesome" sounds.

Also the in-between car riding is a high risk factor to pedestrians crossing the road as they will be focusing on cars but not aware there is a bike flying towards them. Most middle fingers we get is from these guys when you don't give them way to pass through.

This article comes from an experience I encountered on the freeway. I was changing lanes and since all was clear, I pushed my indicators but don't know where this biker came from. I just heard a massive rave followed by a middle finger as I could do little but wave to say sorry.

We do not have a problem with bikers but we ask that you abide by the rules of the road so we can enjoy driving in our beautiful South Africa.

CREDIT WHERE CREDIT IS DUE

Dear Editor

With regards to the opinion piece by Sean Nurse, Buying a bike: Things to consider, in the week 47 edition, I just want to mention the following:

I've been a licensed 50 cc rider for 38 years now. I am still riding. Over the years, I have developed a very sceptical outlook to the views expressed by motoring / motorcycle journalists, especially from a relatively inexperienced point of view.

Riding a motorcycle requires skill and a sense of intuition, you actually know who is going to turn in front of you etc. based on nothing more than feeling and experience.

You however have delivered an amazingly factual account and I agree with everything you have stated... a rare occurrence indeed.

▶ THROWBACK

Ford Model T celebrated

> CHARL BOSCH

VOTED THE greatest car of the 20th century in 1999, the history of the Ford Model T was officially celebrated by the Ford Model A Club of South Africa and the Ford Motor Company of Southern Africa (FMCSA) at the Vintage and Veteran Car Club in Melrose on October fifth.

→ THE HISTORY

In production from 1908 to 1927 with over 14 million units being sold worldwide, the Model T, or Tin Lizzie as it affectingly became known, came into being five years before company founder Henry Ford famously introduced the first moving automotive assembly line, which helped cut assembly time down from 12-and-a-half hours to one-and-half.

Originally priced at $825 in 1909 but reduced to a mere $260 in 1925 at Ford's behest, the Model T also played a significant role in South Africa where it was assembled in a converted wool shop near Port Elizabeth from 1924 using complete knock-down (CKD) kits imported from Canada.

Although Ford had been selling versions of it A, B, C, F, K, R and S Models locally since 1904 through the services of PE-based Arkell & Dougless, the new plant helped boost production significantly with some 10-million vehicles being produced in its first year.

The Model T, of which a rumoured 100-150 are believed to still exist in South Africa, was eventually replaced by the second iteration of the Model A in 1927, which ended production in 1931 with a total of 4 858 644 units being sold.

Priced from $500-$1 200 depending on which one of the 12 body types selected, the Model A, 250 of which are still present in the country, recorded orders of 400 000 units two weeks after being shown in the States in that year, with approximately 10 million people or 10% of the US population coming to view it up close.

It was eventually replaced by the short-lived revived Model B in 1932 which itself made way for the second generation Model C from 1935-1937.

→ CELEBRATING VINTAGE IN STYLE

Along with a strong contingent of Model T and Model A's attending the event, the latter including a number of early V8 models as well as three pick-ups, the day also drew some of Ford's other creations; a 1907 Model N, an immaculate 1956 Thunderbird soft-top and an even more stunning 1940's Lincoln H-series V12 sedan with its distinctive streamlined rear end and enclosed rear wheels.

Ford's wildest stallion gallops in

> CHARL BOSCH

IF EVER there was an automotive dictionary explaining the various terms used in the industry, the definition of "muscle car" would most certainly feature an image of a Ford Mustang and nothing else.

The dreams of many a petrol head came true when the top brass at Ford decided to introduce its iconic pony car in right-hand-drive (RHD) markets for the first time as per its 'One Ford Plan' last year.

While South Africa's reported allocation of 900 units a year would still see the Mustang being a rarity on our roads compared to other RHD markets such as Australia and the United Kingdom, it still rates as one of the most eye-catching vehicles when spotted on local roads.

To this end, there was really no chance of being conspicuous when the keys of a striking Mustang GT automatic landed in my hands recently.

Viewed in profile, the Mustang arguably rates as one of the best looking since the original. Whereas its retro themed predecessor was often the target of much criticism, the characteristic long bonnet, imposing headlight cluster, black honeycomb grille and those positively evil-looking black 20-inch Pirelli PZero-shod alloy wheels, provides a distinctive macho and muscular appearance many would struggle to match.

Where the Mustang plays its biggest aesthetic trump card however, is when you look at it from the rear. Incorporating nearly every detail of the classic Fastback shape, the bulging wheel arches, steeply raked window line, clear lens three bar lights on either side of the black centre boot panelling and black diffuser, is enough to make anyone quiver with excitement.

If these details still fail to tingle your senses, the Mustang has a further party piece when the sun goes down, in that the mirror mounted puddle lamps display the famous stallion badge at your feet each time the doors are opened or the headlights left on.

The exterior hype sadly fails to continue inside where you are quickly reminded of where the Mustang originates from. Made up of hard and cheap feeling plastics, especially on the dashboard, around the infotainment screen and the glove box lid, the level of finish is a step below from many European sourced Fords, with the buttons for the climate control and toggle switches to adjust the steering and suspension feeling low rent.

On the flip side, no rattles or squeaks were detected throughout the Mustang's stay despite our tester having covered nearly 20 000 km, with comfort in the front drawing no complaints thanks to the six-way electric seats and rake/reach multi-function steering wheel.

As to be expected, space in the back is best described as snug with limited head room due to the sloping roof, and almost no legroom to speak of. Boot, or should I say trunk space, is more commendable with Ford claiming a total capacity of 408-litres.

Although its level of fit-and-finish might leave a lot to be desired, the Mustang certainly does not lack for any mod-cons with features including heated and cooled seats, eight-inch touchscreen display incorporating Ford's SYNC 2 system with Voice Recognition, six-speaker sound system with Bluetooth, Aux and USB, cruise control, traction control, dual-zone climate control, auto on/off lights, rain sense wipers, rear parking sensors with reverse camera, six airbags, Dynamic Stability Control and keyless entry/go.

The shortcomings of the interior are likely to be of minor significance to many enthusiasts though, with the main drawing card being the monster residing underneath that long bonnet.

Push the starter button, the five-litre V8 awakens with a typical bent-eight bark before settling down to a pulsating rumble. While the 306 kW it produces cannot match the smaller capacity turbo options from Germany, the 530 Nm of torque and almost metallic-sounding engine note in a way makes up for this for this, despite not always feeling as fast as the 263 km/h top speed and 0-100 km/h sprint of 5.3 secs suggests.

Some of the blame can be attributed to the leisurely shifting nature of the six-speed automatic gearbox, which blunts the experience by taking its time to swap cogs when you really tend to press on. Slotting the gear lever into S and using the steering wheel mounted paddles offers better response and slicker shifts, yet I still feel that the standard six-speed manual would be the better choice.

As part of the Performance Pack fitted across the range, drivers can also choose from four driving modes by flicking the Mode switch underneath the ventilation controls, namely Normal, Sport+, Track and Snow/Ice. While the latter was seldom called upon, selecting Sport+ did showcase some Mustang magic with quicker throttle response and sharper steering.

This being the first Mustang to also feature an independent rear suspension and limited slip diff, handling was praiseworthy while the ride, admittedly, tended to be on the hard side thanks to those 255/40 section wheels and a firm suspension setup. As for fuel consumption, well the best observed was 14.8 litres/100 km though this would be of a little interest to many Mustang buyers.

It is by no means the most sophisticated nor does it have the level of quality as some its rivals, but what the Ford Mustang has in its defence, is character and a presence hard to match. Factor in that normally aspirated V8 upfront, you have package some will consider as unbeatable. ● ad

100 years of BMW with the M1

'The result of an intended partnership between BMW and Lamborghini, which ended in 1978 when the Sant' Agata firm went into receivership, only 453 examples of the low-slung (1 140mm in height) Giugiaro penned M1 went on sale from 1978-1981, with the car also being one of the first to have its engine in the middle.'

- Charl Bosch

IT SELDOM happens that many automakers allow members of the media behind the wheel of some of their most significant and historical models. After all, not only are these in limited supply and extremely valuable, but the thought of being damaged or completely written off makes for further reasoning as to why they should stay in a museum or behind a glass partition at the factory. Or does it?

To mark its centenary this year, BMW South Africa recently took the leap by inviting a number of scribes to experience two of their most their most famous models first hand; the unique to South Africa E30 333i and the very first M-car, the M1.

Part of BMW South Africa's Heritage Collection, which once also included a E28 M5 and a E23 745i that were sold to private buyers in the early 1990s, both have undergone extensive restoration work with the M1 also receiving a new paint finish from its original blue to red.

Truth be told, there was a sense of huge excitement and even bigger nervousness from yours truly when observing the 333i and M1 parked outside BMW's head office in Midrand for the first time.

Adding to the mix was the fact the M1 was never offered for sale in right-hand-drive, meaning I would have to change gear with my right hand for the first time ever, while a further curveball was that both featured dog-leg boxes; a configuration derived from racing where first gear occupies the position you would normally expect second, with second, third, fourth and fifth falling behind each other.

Following a short briefing about the vehicles, it was time to hit the road with our destination being the lunch stop at a country hotel near Magaliesburg some 100km away. With a driver change set for the midway point, I happily lowered myself into the very snug cab of the M1 for the first leg of the journey.

The result of an intended partnership between BMW and Lamborghini, which ended in 1978 when the Sant' Agata firm went into receivership, only 453 examples of the low-slung (1 140mm in height) Giugiaro penned M1 went on sale from 1978-1981, with the car also being one of the first to have its engine in the middle.

Rolling out of the office car park and onto the N1, it quickly became apparent that the M1 can shame many modern cars with its comfortable ride setup. The seats might be narrow and air-conditioning still a novelty, you do get electric windows weirdly, it rides smoothly with the refurbished but still forty year old suspension soaking up imperfections with absolute aplomb.

However, it is when your drop it to third and floor the throttle that the real magic kicks in. Nested just behind your right is a motorsport derived 3.5 litre fuel injected straight six that produces 204kW and 329Nm of torque, which allowed for a 0-100 km/h sprint of around 6.0 seconds and top speed of 262 km/h.

Devoid of any modern fripperies such as twin-scroll turbocharging, the noise is best described as glorious at full chat, with that typical BMW inline six scream becoming more evident as you go pass 4 000 rpm. But what is it like to drive the very first BMW M-car?

Getting in on the left hand side with nothing but a bare steering wheel, analogue instrument cluster and most of the switches written in German was an unnerving experience, especially when you factor in that the M1 is more valuable than any modern M-car.

Selecting first gear and upping the revs to avoid stalling - the clutch bite point is quite high and the pedal itself hardly a marsh mellow - I set off gingerly before going for second as the revs begin to climb and the engine prepares to unleash that straight six crescendo.

Requiring a firm hand to change cogs, I select third and nail it as the revs exceeded 4 000 rpm and then 5 000 rpm as the country side rapidly flashed passed. Ignoring the fact that I am sitting on the wrong side and levels of perspiration caused by not opening the window, the M88/1 power unit continued its assault on my senses as the confines of the concrete jungle made way for the open bushveld of rural Gauteng.

Constructed mostly out of glass reinforced plastic, which sees it tipping the scales at 1.3 tons, the M1 also lacks power steering, meaning you can feel the road through your fingertips with each turn of the wheel with levels of feedback some power assisted system could only dream of.

Granted, making tighter turns calls for some serious wheel work, but that is a small price to pay for flinging the godfather of M-cars through the flowing corners of the Highveld with complete precision, while that soundtrack remains on cue each time you exercise your right toe.

Arriving at our destination with the drive back to Johannesburg set to be undertaken in the 333i, the notion of having piloted the very first BMW M-car began to sink in. Calling it a privilege would be an understatement as no real description, apart from those using language better not said here, can truly summarise what many a petrolhead will give virtually everything for to experience.

A brave way to celebrate its 100th birthday indeed, but one which BMW South Africa needs commending for and which other manufacturers should take notice of. Next week, I wrap up my experience by sharing my thoughts on the iconic E30 333i.

It was an absolute privilege to drive a supercar icon as Charl discovered on his recent bucket list drive in the BMW M1.
